Tracing the Slayer

CHAPTER 27

"WE KNOW that this was not the only note written by 'X.' Another was completed and instead of being torn up was sent directly to Felise Morgan, the mother of Doris. The purpose of this was manifest. It was to create even in the mind of Dr. Maskell's nearest and dearest a doubt of his innocence, and to show to the police the ostensible motive for the deed. Further, the note also showed us where to look for the body—it gave us our first intimation of the house on Peddler's Road—serving two deadly purposes."

Natalie Maskell smiled in admiration.

"It is marvellous how you have worked this out, Mr. Colt," she said. "I am beginning to be afraid that you have anticipated the very defense we have been preparing, and which absolutely clears my brother-in-law."

"But your husband does not seem so confident," sneered Dougherty. The District Attorney was still entirely unimpressed by Thatcher Colt's reconstruction of the case. And in this instance Dougherty had spoken shrewdly. Old George Maskell, the lion of the court rooms of New York, looked depressed. His eyes were like the windows of an empty house. Yet he answered the remark of Dougherty directly and forcefully.

Key Made

"I'm listening to all that is said," he replied. "I will reply at the proper time."

"Also," interrupted Natalie, "you have not explained why Humphrey was selected as the victim of this mysterious 'X.' Why all these devilish preparations?"

Thatcher Colt smiled mysteriously.

"That will presently appear," he said. "Doctor Maskell was the only possible victim in this case. 'X' had also been busy finding out about the private affairs of the doctor during the autumn. Everything that he would wish to keep hidden had been found out by this prying 'X.' He had been followed to the home on Peddler's Road, and his secret love affair was known.

"I learned that 'X' had burglarized the house on Peddler's Road, got inside and studied the layout of the little house. More than that, 'X' had sent for a locksmith and had a private key made for the front door. The locksmith, by the way, is now under this same roof with us. 'X' could come and go in the house at whim, so long as the doctor and his friend were not there.

"Therefore, 'X' had contrived free access to the stage on which the coming drama of blood was to be played. And, while lurking in the house, 'X's' allseeing eyes had fallen upon Doctor Maskell's axe.

Final Touch

"Even then, the preparations for this crime were not complete. 'X' must add a final touch of horror, to seal the doctor's doom. By now, you must begin to see that Geraldine Foster was only an incident in the scheme. The doctor was to be the real victim. His wife's death was to be encompassed, and the State would do the killing. 'X' would commit the murder of the girl. No one would see. Then 'X' must preserve the dead body against decay until it would be possible further to entangle Doctor Maskell.

"It might be days—even a week—yet when the body was found, it must have the appearance of being freshly killed. Tannic acid would do that. The idea was flicked from an old murder in New Jersey with which I am, as well as 'X' was, familiar. The plan was clearly defined. To kill, put the body in the tub, soak it in the preservative, and leave it there. Later, one could go back, bury the body, and then contrive by some device to involve the doctor with a difficulty in proving his movements. But he must not get into the house, otherwise he would discover what had happened, perhaps notify the police himself, and thus rub off some of the sheen of suspicion

POLICE WAR ON GASTON BUILDING

Hultman Seeks to Close Property as "Haunt for Drug Addicts"

Chinatown premises owned by the estate of the late William A. Gaston were termed a narcotic nuisance in a petition to restrain them filed in Suffolk Superior Court by the police department today.

Two such petitions to restrain and abate alleged drug nuisances—the first such in the city's history—were filed for Commissioner Hultman by his legal advisor, Leo Schwartz.

The Gaston estate was named as owner of premises at 7 Tyler st., where, the petition states, 13 narcotic convictions have been obtained in two years. John K. Howard and Frederick Snow were named as trustees of the estate. Occupants of the alleged nuisance are Chinese.

It is charged the place was used for sale and by addicts.

The other premises are at 8 Hudson st., allegedly owned by Sew L. Wong and Wong Toy Ho.

The cases will be heard February 27.

TRUSTY 'LIFER' LOSES JOB

A "shakeup" among the trusties at State Prison took place today on orders of Warden James B. Hogsett, as a result of the finding of heroin a few days ago, in connection with which two prisoners were placed in solitary confinement.

A "lifer," who has assisted the guard on the main gate for the past four years, has been given duty in the inner yard, and no prisoner will be assigned to take his place. Several trusties acting as runners in the various wings have been transferred to other work.

A guard in one of the wings has been transferred to the outside wall, and replaced by an officer who has been on duty on the wall. The reason for this change was given as a quarrel between two inner guards yesterday morning.

Illegal Voter Is Given Jail Term

Lawrence Woods of Centre st., Jamaica Plain, was found guilty of voting illegally last September and was sentenced to 10 days by Judge Harold P. Williams in Suffolk Superior Court today. Police alleged that Woods entered a voting booth in Elmwood st., Roxbury, September 16, and voted under the name of "Jase Andre" of Ward st., Roxbury.

New Athletic Field in Lynn Proposed

Mayor Manning of Lynn would abandon the stadium on Maple st. as a high school field and establish a new 10-acre plot adjacent to the newly-erected Eastern Senior High School at Memorial Park. The old stadium could be used as a playground for the children of the Glenmere section.

Capt. Skillings Is Sent to Brighton

Capt. Perley S. Skillings was appointed commander of Division 14, Brighton, in general orders issued today by Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman.

FOUND LOVE ON SEA

PHILADELPHIA MISS TO WED PURSER

Sea Romance Bared on Arrival of the Scythia; 50 Passengers Land

The Cunard liner Scythia came into port today with 50 Boston passengers from Liverpool and Queenstown, and the story of a romance that blossomed during the voyage.

The romantic couple are Miss Haugaterfes, a student at Temple University, Philadelphia, and James MacDermott, the tourist purser. The girl, who has been visiting a sister and touring the British Isles for five months, admitted they had become engaged.

GREETED BY UNCLE

Miss Katherine M. Guiney, 19, of Listowel, County Kerry, Ireland, was met at the dock by her uncle, Thomas M. Guiney, wealthy resident, of 25 Goodnough st., Brookline. She will finish her studies here.

Miss Erin O'Brien Moore was on the liner, returning to New York from a London stage success in "Street Scene."

Rev. B. Grimley, D.D., Ph.D., a London priest, was met by a group of Boston clerical friends, who accompanied him to a train for New York, where he is to deliver a series of Lenten sermons.

207 ON LINER.

There were 207 passengers in all aboard the vessel.

Boston passengers included Mrs. J. Tucker Burr, E. T. Callan, W. C. Eastern, W. S. Day, Fred Lee Blaisc, Jr., Sydney T. Hesp, Mrs. W. M. Hearn, Mrs. M. E. May, C. W. Maude, Archibald Murray, Mrs. M. Robery, W. Rynveld, Maj. A. C. C. Walker, Charles H. Ward, Mrs. E. Whittaker and her daughters, C. V. M. and J. J. C. Whittaker, and P. C. Thurston.

STUDENT PAYS $50 AUTO FINE

William H. Farnham, 21, Harvard student, living in Hollis Hall in the college yard, was fined $50 in municipal court today for dangerous driving. He paid.

His car struck and injured Mrs. Mary Barron of 176 Beacon st. and Mrs. Mary McNaughton of 22 Commonwealth ave., on December 11, at Beacon and Berkeley sts., Back Bay.

Special Officers William Maguire and John Flaherty testified that, according to witnesses interviewed by them, Farnham was driving at excessive speed.

The youth denied this and told Judge Good it was a rainy night and he did not see the two women until he struck them. He said he helped remove them in the relief hospital, where they were under treatment three weeks.

Leaders of Roxbury to Dine Judge Miles

Judge Frankland W. L. Miles of Roxbury court will be tendered a reception and dinner in the Hotel Bradford Tuesday evening, March 10. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m.

Dr. Leon E. Balicer heads the committee of arrangements. Attorney Charles H. Savage is secretary and Morris Elterman, Roxbury jeweler, treasurer. Harry Haddock of the Eliot Savings Bank, Dudley st., Roxbury, has charge of tickets.

Prisoner's Laugh in Court Costs Him 30 Days

The irrepressible sense of humor of James A. Bernard of Columbia st., Cambridge, cost him 30 more days of liberty in Waltham court.

Bernard laughed when a two months' sentence in the house of correction was imposed by Judge Cunniff on a charge of non-support.

"What are you laughing at?" inquired the court.

"Nothing," replied the defendant.

Judge Cunniff thereupon added another month to Bernard's term, but the latter didn't even smile when the amended sentence was announced.

Man Held When He Reports Auto Stolen

When Richard Duca of Tremont st., South End, went to East Dedham st. station to report his automobile stolen, the police had a surprise awaiting him. Special Officers Frank McGeever and Martin Coleman had found the car, but instead of turning it over to Duca, they placed him under arrest, because in the machine they had found a revolver, nine bullets, a blackjack, three hats and three coats.

Duca was charged with having control of the weapons and in municipal court today, where he pleaded not guilty, was held in $100 for a hearing Friday.

DOOLEY HELD IN GIRL'S DEATH

Charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Geraldine Garvey, 22, telephone operator, who was shot in a Riverway apartment two weeks ago, Philip Dooley of Greenwood ave., Hyde Park, was arraigned in Roxbury district court today.

He pleaded not guilty to charges which included carrying a revolver without license, and was held in $6000 for the grand jury.

Sergt. Edward J. Kelly of Station 10 testified that Alden Butt, occupant of the apartment in which the shooting occurred, was the owner of the weapon and had shown it to Dooley during the latter's visit there.

Missing Man's Body Found in Quarry

The body of Gunnar Olsen, 25, reported missing from his Whitewell street home three weeks ago, was found by police today in an abandoned stone quarry in West Quincy. The police said that Olsen had been seeking work nearby and had apparently lost his footing as he walked along the edge of the quarry.

BOY ACCUSED IN DREYER DEATH

Frederick Crogan, 19, of Pleasant st., Dorchester, was taken to a State institution today to face another boy who, according to the police, accuses him of a part in the slaying of Patrolman Franklin A. Dreyer in Dorchester last April.

The name of his accuser and the place where he is confined were kept a secret by police officials pending further developments.

Crogan, it was revealed, has been sought for several days for questioning in connection with the slaying.

When arrested by police of Field's Corner division last night he was charged with assault and battery, larceny and carrying a gun in the holdup of Henry Kerver of Centre st., Dorchester, two weeks ago.

Headquarters was notified and Capt. John C. Bilton sent for Inspector James Dennessey of the homicide squad to question the boy. Crogan steadfastly denied the killing. He was exhibited at roll-call this morning and was again grilled by Inspector Dennessey and Deputy Supt. McDevitt before being taken to face his accuser.

Police say that Crogan is also suspected of participation in a number of holdups and handbag thefts with two other boys, both of whom are under arrest.

The latter died yesterday at the age of 56. He was a native of Worcester, a descendant of William Manning of Cambridge, and was educated in Boston, leaving here in 1910 to enter the publishing business, in which he became an outstanding figure.

He is survived by three sons and his wife, the former Mabel Porter Conant, a descendant of Roger Conant, one of the founders of Salem. The family had homes at Highland Park, Ill., and New York city. Earl Manning is general agent for the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., with offices at 1 Federal st.

FRANK HOLT ©Acme J.P MORGAN

WHEN THE TIME BOMB exploded in the Senate wing of the Capitol at Washington, on July 2, 1915, Frank Holt, instructor in German at Cornell University, lost little time, for at 9 o'clock the following morning he was far out on the North Shore of Long Island, leaving a taxi to enter the estate of J. Pierpont Morgan at Glen Cove. When Mr. Morgan's butler requested Holt to wait, Holt pulled out two guns and in the tussle that followed, Mr. Morgan was shot in the hip, but not until the butler had administered a real thrashing to Holt. The intruder is shown soon after his arrest at the Morgan home. (International Newsreel photos.)

By DAN W. GALLAGHER

(Who worked on the case as a reporter)

Following is the third instalment of another case in a gripping series of articles on famous New England murder cases appearing daily in the Boston Evening American.

(Being an old-time reporter's experiences in connection with the amazing case of Prof. Erich Muenter of Harvard, who fled Cambridge in 1906 while authorities were probing the death of his wife. The investigation disclosed Mrs. Muenter had been poisoned. All efforts to trace her husband failed. Nine years later, a man attempted to kill J. Pierpont Morgan in his Glen Cove, N. Y., mansion. Upon being arrested, he identified himself as Frank Holt, instructor in German at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. His recognition as Muenter followed. Whereupon he committed suicide in jail. Today's instalment tells of his invasion of the Morgan home.)

EARLY ON THE morning of July 2, 1915, a time bomb exploded in the Senate wing of the Capitol at Washington, doing considerable damage. At 9 o'clock the following morning a slight, smooth-faced, well-dressed man arrived at Glen Cove, Long Island, N. Y., by train and hired Matthew Cramer, taxicab chauffeur, to drive him to the summer home of J. Pierpont Morgan. The stranger carried a suitcase and made no inquiries during the three-mile ride.

Upon reaching the Morgan estate, he paid the driver, told him not to wait, took up the suitcase and entered the grounds. When he mounted the stairs and rang the bell Mr. and Mrs. Morgan and their overnight guests, Sir Cecil and Lady Spring-Rice, were at breakfast.

John Physic (a strange name, but it's correct), Morgan's butler, answered the summons. Whereupon the caller handed him a card, with instructions to give it to Mr. Morgan. That card bore the words "Frank Holt, Cornell University."

PULLS REVOLVER

Physic told the stranger Mr. Morgan was at breakfast and that in any event it would be impossible for him to receive a visitor since the requirements called for communicating with him through his New York office as the first step towards an interview. At this the caller, who had set down the suitcase, drew two revolvers, pointed them at the butler and ordered him to stand aside.

What followed to beat told in the words of Mrs. Morgan. I quote from notes made at the interview

GOODWIN CITES $60,000 'DOLE'

"The city of Boston welfare department is paying out from $60,000 to $70,000 a week in what is practically a dole," Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, declared today before the joint legislative committee on taxation in favoring his bill for an additional tax of 20 per cent on incomes, savings banks and business corporations.

The purpose of the proposed tax is to establish in the state treasury an unemployment relief fund to be distributed in cities and towns as reimbursement for expenditures made by them in relief of the unemployed.

"A terrible condition exists at the present time," continued Mr. Goodwin, "with a shrinkage of from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 in income taxes and an additional cost of $16,000,000 to $20,000,000 in the cost of running cities next year, the cities of this state must raise from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 more next year than this year.

"Where is it coming from? You're going to get into some trouble if you attempt to increase the gasoline tax. Organizations representing State st. will want you to continue to take it from those who haven't got it, and not touch intangibles. It is about time the Massachusetts Legislature got some money from an untapped source, on dividends paid out on stock of Massachusetts corporations.

"So long as don't tax intangibles and make them pay what they should, real estate is going to bear the burden, which is already too heavy. This bill of mine would raise $6,000,000."

Attys. Alexander Whiteside and Phillip Nichols, leading Boston lawyers, spoke against the bill.

"I am opposed because there are other ways of raising money," said Mr. Whiteside. "We are sincerely alarmed at the idea of intangible property leaving Massachusetts."

Woman Is Robbed on Own Doorstep

A purse snatcher seized a handbag from Miss Mary A. Barrett as she was unlocking the door of her house at 14 Gage st., South Boston, and escaped despite her outcries.

Miss Barrett was putting the key in the lock when the snatcher seized the bag, containing $3.68 and some papers.

Wakeful restless CHILD needs Castoria

We can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Other times it's constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked promptly. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother continues it in more liberal doses as a child grows up.

Readily obtained at any drug-store, the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher signature and the name Castoria on the wrapper like this:

LAST TRIBUTES ARE PAID TO E. H. GOODWIN

State officials, officers and members of the United States and Boston Chambers of Commerce and 60 employes of the Civil Service and other departments, attended the funeral today of Elliot H. Goodwin, chairman of the Civil Service Commission.

Funeral services were held at Christ Church, Cambridge, at 2 p. m., with the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn officiating.

Among those attending were four former directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce, John H. Fahey, publisher of the Worcester Post; Edward A. Filene, Walton L. Crocker, president of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, and Bernard J. Rothwell.

Boston Girl Weds Jap Secretly in Store Romance

A romance that started in a Boylston st., Back Bay art store, between a stenographer and a Japanese salesman, culminated today in their wedding in New York.

According to dispatches from that city Miss Hazel R. Wells, 21, of 94 Washington st., Brighton, and Susumu Hirota, 22, of 104 Queensbury st., Back Bay, were married in the Municipal Chapel this morning.

Mrs. Alice G. Wells, the girl's mother, said the wedding took place against the wishes of her family, and that it shattered the hopes of a rejected suitor.

Her daughter, she said, met the Japanese when she went to work in the Boylston st. store in 1928.

Lynn Lawyer Again Missing, His Wife Tells Police

The second disappearance in two months by Herbert W. Simmons, 33, certified public accountant, lawyer and income tax expert of Lynn, was reported to Lynn police today by his wife.

Simmons, connected with the old-established law firm of Parsons, Wadleigh & Crowley in the Grosman building, Lynn, left the offices yesterday, apparently in good spirits, but has not been seen since.

Mrs. Simmons, at her home, 21 Chestnut ave., Lynn, told police she believed he might be at a camp he owns in Maine.

Cambridge Woman Asks for Divorce

Declaring her husband, Harold Parker, formerly a bond salesman for a Boston bank, was cruel to her and left her within six months of their marriage, Mrs. Marion H. Parker of Cambridge, filed suit for divorce toda yin Middlesex Probate Court.

She said they were married February 27, 1926, in Boston, and lived on Buckminster rd., Brookline. On August 15 of the same year he was cruel she asserts and deserted her the following day

Unidentified Woman Dies After Collapse

An unidentified woman, about 40 years old, collapsed in a Tremont st. store today and died shortly after her arrival at Haymarket Relief Hospital. In her handbag was found a card on which was written "Catholic Mission, St. Joseph's Church, West End."

She was five feet five inches in height, weighed about 130 pounds, medium complexion, with dark hair and blue eyes and wore a seal-skin coat, black silk dress and black and white scarf.

RECOVERY OF CITY FUNDS SOUGHT

Bonding Company Is Named Also in Connection With Tremont Trust Failure

Writs in one of two $500,000 suits were served today by a Middlesex county constable on City Treasurer Henry F. Lehan of Cambridge at his home, 399 Broadway, Cambridge.

The writs were in a joint suit against Treasurer Lehan and the Massachusetts Bonding Co., which bonded the city treasurer. It is claimed, at the time funds of Cambridge were deposited in the Tremont Trust Co., which later collapsed.

City Solicitor Sullivan turned the writs over to the Middlesex County sheriff's office yesterday, announcing that this $500,000 suit and another in the same amount against Lehan individually, would soon be filed.

The writs served today are returnable in third district court at East Cambridge.

Mayor Russell, who has long been endeavoring to supplant Lehan as treasurer, has a bill now in legislative committee which would give him power to oust Lehan.

In a letter to the legislative committee on cities, the mayor yesterday called attention of the committee to "the personal interests and character" of those who appeared against the bill.

These included Representative Paul A. Dever, who was ex-Mayor Quinn's campaign manager in the election fight against Mayor Russell; John W. Lyons, the Lehan candidate for the House; John J. Tobin, campaign manager for Lyons; Frank J. Lehan, cousin of the city treasurer; Patrick J. Delaney, counsel for Lehan, and others.

Federal Juryman Suffers Collapse

Harley N. Smith of Gardner, member of the Federal Grand Jury, collapsed from acute indigestion today in the jury room at the Federal building. A doctor was summoned and administered first aid. Later it was announced that Smith would be all right after a rest, and he was not taken to a hospital. The jurors were deliberating over a case at the time and after a short delay continued with their work without Smith.

Waltham Wife Is Sued for Divorce

Romeo Saverse, Waltham salesman, filed suit for divorce in Middlesex probate court at East Cambridge today, alleging that his wife, Mary, deserted him in June, 1927, four years after their marriage. They have two children. Mrs. Saverse is said to be living in Cambridge.

TRAFFIC PLAN IS SCORED

Attempting to regulate pedestrian traffic is futile, according to former Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin, who addressed the legislative committee on highways and motor vehicles today in opposition to a bill sponsored by Mayor Curley and advocated by Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry.

Under this bill the authority now given to regulate vehicles would be extended to pedestrians.

The speaker alluded to the failures of the street commission to regulate pedestrians when he was a member of that board at the time "stop and go" signals were first tried out.

"Pedestrians in this State have an inalienable right to use the streets under a decision of the Supreme Court," he said.

He pointed out that under the motor vehicle laws an operator of an automobile must slow down when approaching a pedestrian.

Under another section of this bill the traffic commission would take from the police commissioner the responsibility of locating public taxicab stands.

CLOSE RACE IN WATERTOWN

Spirited contests marked the race for nominations to the board of selectmen and the school commit ee in the Watertown Democratic caucus yesterday.

The strike of high school pupils last fall, due to the lengthening of the school hours, is responsible for the intense interest in the school committee nominations, it is said. The Republican caucus is being held today.

Those nominated for the board of selectmen yesterday were Joseph H. Sheehan, 1434 votes, John P. Oates, 1287 and Maurice H. O'Connell, 1154. They defeated Arthur C. Fagan, Daniel J. Murphy and Charles J. Holland.

In the school committee fight former Committeeman Francis A. Kelly led with 1580 votes. Francis P. Carroll and Mary Corcoran, member of the present school committee, had a close race for the next two positions. Those defeated were John A. Murray and William P. Monahan.

Pericles Canzanelli defeated Dr. Walter M. Second for the board of health candidacy. J. Joseph Cuniff won the water commission nomination over Francis A. McDermott and Martin J. Reid defeated William W. Rugg in the race for the planning board.

BUDGET HOLDS SECRET OF HOME HAPPINESS FOR THESE BOSTON MOTHERS

THE BUDGET IS THE THING, says Mrs. Ida Fairneny of 16 Clarendon st., South End, who is a staunch supporter of the theory that a small salary can be made to go a long, long way if properly handled. Mrs. Fairneny is carrying her son, Robert, 1½ years old.

A BIG SALARY would be nice, but a small one can care for everything and keep everybody happy and comfortable if applied properly, Mrs. Ruby Loftin believes. Mrs. Loftin is shown here with her three treasures, Evelyn, 2, Margaret, 3, and Donald, 6.

WHATEVER THE INCOME, one can always manage, asserts Mrs. Sally Newman, who lives on Charles st., West End. It all depends upon the housewife and the skill she displays in fitting the expenses to meet the salary. Mrs. Newman's son is Barry Foster Newman.

MRS. MARY HAGEN of Charles st., wife of a police officer, makes her $40 a week income keep her husband and two children very comfortable. From the $40, $5 must be deducted for Patrolman Hagen's lunches while on duty, too. Mrs. Hagen's children are Patsy, 3, and Fanny, 4.

Honored

FELIX VORENBERG, president of the Gilchrist Co., was honored at a banquet tendered him by members of the store's executive staff last night (Bachrach photo.)

Felix Vorenberg, president of the Gilchrist Co., was honored at a banquet tendered him last night at the Copley-Plaza Hotel by 85 executives and buyers of the store.

William J. Dixon, furniture buyer, acted as toastmaster. Among others who honored Mr. Vorenberg were: Fred Vorenberg, F. Frank Vorenberg, Samuel Vorenberg, J. J. Bulger, comptroller; Mrs. S. S. Graham, sales manager.

Members of the executive staff present included: Mrs. Mollie Goldband, Abe Snyder, Bert Richmond, J. J. Burnee, Henry Wyman, Mark Bamburger, Charles Harvey, credit manager; Albert M. Stevens, basement manager, and Mrs. Ismbel May.

BUDGET ART OF BOSTON WOMAN

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

It may cost a society family several thousands a year to bring up junior. But in the south, north and west ends of Boston, mothers are doing it on considerably less. They'll have you know they are happy in doing it, too.

Mrs. Ida Fairneny of 16 Clarendon st., South End, said she can take care of a baby in its first year for approximately $200. And young Robert, one and a half years old, proved acquiescence.

ALL UP TO MOTHER

Prompted by a comment of Arthur Brisbane, writing from Los Angeles on the question of the cost of raising a family, a representative of the Boston Evening American visited many homes to find out how it is being done and on how much.

On the west coast, a woman said a family could not be brought up on less than $60 a week; another woman said she was raising four children on $35 a week.

But in Boston—

Now take Mrs. Ruby Loftin of 12 James ave., South End, for instance.

There are three youngsters, Evelyn, two, Margaret, three, and Donald, six. The Loftin family, daddy Loftin included, live in a two-room basement apartment with a $22 weekly income.

PAY GOES LONG WAY

Th family's only income comes from her husband.

On a police officer's salary of $40 a week from which five dollars must be deducted for his outside meals, Mrs. Harry Hagen of 379 Charles st., mother of two children, manages very well, she said. She would enjoy having a police officer's salary raised, but as it is, she derives comfort and happiness out of life on the amount she has. It is possible to clothe and feed her family and have comforts in their home, she added.

STARTLING STARS!

Can You Make One?

25 pairs of seats to "Nina Rosa" and "Up Pops The Devil" in prizes

Every week day the Evening American will publish one drawing under the heading STARTLING STARS. You are invited to mark up the drawing in any way you see fit—take lines out, leave them in or add to them—a nd send it, with your name and full address to STARTLING STARS Editor, Evening American, 3 Winthrop sq., Boston.

For the funniest faces received each week day, four pairs of seats to the popular musical show, "Nina, Rosa," featuring Leonard Ceeley at Shubert Theater, or to "Up Pops the Devil," the new comedy hit at the Wilbur Theater, will be awarded. One extra pair will be awarded on Saturdays, making a total of 25 pairs of seats for the week.

ALL STARTLING STARS must be received in the office of the American not later than 8 p. m., three days following publication of that drawing. The prize winners will be announced in the American one week after each drawing is published. The drawings that win three of the prizes will be published at the same time.

ANOTHER MUSICAL show star. See what you can do with this drawing with a pen or pencil, making it look as funny as you can. Then mail it as directed in the rules. You must put the number of the drawing on the OUTSIDE of your envelope.

You don't have to use the drawing on this page unless you wish. It may be copied or traced on another sheet of paper. The American may be examined at any of its agencies or at public libraries free of charge.

Any one, anywhere, may compete, except American employes and their families. The editors of the American will be the judges, and their decision will be final.

We cannot undertake to return any entries or enter into correspondence concerning the contest.

You pay nothing to enter this contest. Neatness will count. In case of ties a duplicate award will be given each tying contestant.

WINNING TIP ON EDWARDS

Invaluable assistance that was one of the factors in scoring a beat for this newspaper on the death of Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, won the first prize award for the week of $15 in the news tip contest. The name must be withheld.

Not only on the morning of the death but during the last week when the venerable army man hovered between life and death, the person who won had been constantly on the job in the interests of this paper.

Hours ahead, he reported, the turn for the worse, and a reporter stood constant vigil at the Phillips House for a final word.

AN HOUR'S BEAT

The result was the whirling of papers off the presses of the Boston Evening American just 14 minutes after Gen. Edwards breathed his last. The news as given to the public in the regular City Edition of the Boston Evening American more than an hour ahead of other afternoon papers.

The name of the second prize winner must also be withheld but she is entered $10 because she called first on a Dorchester fire in the wee hours of the morning. This tip enabled the American to secre a picture "scoop."

Mitchell Cooperstein of 137 Chestnut st., Chelsea, was first to phone about the killing of a man in Brighton by a train and he won the third award of $5.

Many other good tips were received during the week, many of them exceptionally good but just topped by those who succeeded in reaching the zone of capital prizes.

Next week, 10 persons who are awarded $2 each may reach the upper strata with better news—or maybe you can get into the awards with something that happens about or near you. Remember, exclusive photographs count also.

WINNERS OF $2 EACH

The winners of the $2 awards are:

Albert Farr of 46 Dudley st., Medford. Son of Stoneham coal yard proprietor buried under pile of coal.

H. H. Taylor, 3 Monument st., West Medford. Two dogs rescued by firemen from Mystic river.

J. D. Lowe of East Plain st., Cochituate. Man killed by Natick train.

A. Kieber, 120 Colburn st., Dedham, Boston lawyer missing.

Howard Anderson, 451 Main st., Stoneham. Fire in Stoneham block.

LEE THREATENS RUM EXPOSE

Capt. William W. Livingston of Station 15 has been given a week in which to clean up liquor nuisances in Charlestown. If the former chief of the "Flying Squadron" fails to improve conditions within the allotted time, Representative Robert L. Lee today promised to make surprising disclosures.

Representative Lee flatly refused to make any statement other than the warning announcement. He declined to make public at this time the nature of the charges which he laid before Police Commissioner Hultman on Monday.

SITES CHARLESTOWN

"It wouldn't be fair or ethical for me to do any talking for publication just now," said Representative Lee, "because it was agreed that what transpired at the conference would be kept confidential. But I served notice on Capt. Livingston and I repeat it today that if some positive action is not taken within a week, I shall take the matter in my own hands.

"I am marking time until the period of grace has passed and, therefore, must be excused from going into details."

Despite the reticence of the youthful legislator, the drive he has launched against speakeasies in the Bunker Hill district has aroused widespread interest. It was the high note of gossip in Charlestown today.

MORE RUM DIVES.

Charlestown's so-called "Rum Row" has long been a thorn in the side of residents of the district. Instead of diminishing following Commissioner Hultman's recent order for a clean-up, conditions, according to Lee, have grown worse. New speakeasies are reported to have sprung into existence within the past two weeks.

Naval and prohibition authorities have tried without success to close up the resorts, some of which are said to have operated almost at the gate of Boston Navy Yard. Some of these speakeasies make a special bid for the patronage of blue jackets.

Old-timers point to the fact that the Bunker Hill district has lost 8000 of its population in five years. In 1928 it had a population of 38,000 as against 30,000 at present.

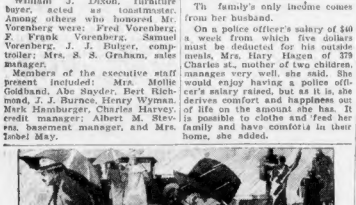
Any COLD



That cold may lead to something serious, if neglected. The time to do something for it is now. Don't wait until it develops into bronchitis. Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin as soon as you feel a cold coming on. Or as soon as possible after it starts. Bayer Aspirin will head off or relieve the aching and feverish feeling—will stop the headache. And if your throat is affected, dissolve two or three tablets in a quarter-glassful of warm water, and gargle. This quickly soothes a sore throat and reduces inflammation and infection. Read proven directions for neuralgia, for rheumatism and other aches and pains. Genuine Bayer Aspirin is harmless to the heart.

Should Make Jim And Primo Wear Foul-Proof Cup.

ODDS AND ENDS ALONG SPORT'S TRAIL

PRIMO CARNERA.

BECAUSE of the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN'S insistence when Primo Carnera and Jim Maloney met here in the Boston Garden, the match was surrounded with every safeguard and precaution. The big thing that gave public confidence in the match was the fact that boxers were made to agree to wear the foul proof protector. It assured the customers the bout would not be abbreviated by any foul and must either be won by a knockout or on points at the full distance.

All Boston and New York sports writers who saw the contest agreed that it was one of the fastest, fiercest heavyweight encounters in ring history. Yet New York reporters who were at the ringside here are showing little interest in the encounter in Miami. Why?

Because the Miami match so far has not been safeguarded with the protections insisted upon by the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN for the first match here. As yet no precautions have been taken against one or the other of the boxers "fooling out" or otherwise besmirching the encounter.

IN THIS writer's humble opinion, there is every indication that Carnera and Maloney will fight on the level in Miami. Both Carnera and Maloney have a fortune at stake in future matches. Neither, it seems, could be paid enough to "lose" the match.

But public confidence has been shaken in boxing. For the game's sake and for his own pocketbook's sake promoter Frank Bruen should insist both boxers agree to wear the foul proof cup and legally enter into an agreement that the contest cannot be decided on a foul. Bruen should be exceptionally careful as regards THE THIRD MAN IN THE RING.

KING GUSTAVE V.

CROWDING KAREL KOZELUH, world's professional tennis champion, who meets Big Bill Tilden tomorrow night in New York and again here in the Boston Garden on Friday, into a few paragraphs is some stunt. But let's go—

Karel has instructed kings and presidents. Tutored King Gustavus V of Sweden and Prof. Masaryk, President of Czechoslovakia. Also Davis cup teams of the United States, England and Italy. The last word in tennis technique. At the age of 16 won European professional doubles championship with his brother, Joseph.

Koseluh was world's professional tennis champion when the war started in 1914. Served four years in army. Resuming tennis in 1919, again won world's title. Won again in 1925-26-27-28-29. Lost title in 1930 to Vinnie Richards last year but on tour showed commanding superiority over the American.

He is one of seven sons and one daughter of tanner Kozeluh. His sister is amateur champion of her native land. Six brothers still are living and all are tennis devotees. Joe coaches leading Swedish players. Alois is one of the foremost professionals at the Beaulieu club on the French Riviera.

TILDEN'S OPPONENT is a remarkable all-around athlete. Played soccer on Olympic teams and toured South America and other countries as captain of a Czechoslovakia team. Is a great skater. Still skates but bemoans the fact skating ties him up for tennis and can't do much ice work before important matches.

BIG BILL and Koseluh never met in actual competition. In practice at Beaulieu after a heavy lunch and after teaching tennis seven hours a day for weeks Karel lost 6—2, 6—4. After that they played three times at Monte Carlo in practice matches. Big Bill won 6—2, 6—4, 6—2. In next match play was stopped when Karel was seized with cramps when leading 6—4, 6—5 and 40-30. The last match was a one-set affair, which the Czecho Slovak won 6—1.

JAMES E. SULLIVAN

LAST NIGHT'S big New York A. C. meet, which you will read about elsewhere on the sports page, now is history along with the first indoor meet ever staged by the Mercury Foot club, November 11, 1888, close to half a century ago.

Even old Madison Square Garden was not built then. The games were held in American Institute Rink. One of the features was a race on a velocipede, "a wonderful engine of locomotion," as a sports writer of that era termed it. The late James E. Sullivan once gave us a clipping of his article. He writes:

"The carriage consists of but two wheels, placed one before the other, with a treadle apparatus to each. Without speaking a word of the velocity with which one can cover ground by riding this machine, the wonder is how he can maintain a balance on it at all. Yet this seems to be no part of the difficulty in navigating; on the contrary, every effort of the rider seems bent on driving it at breakneck speed. The ease and celerity with which this wonderful engine of locomotion was turned around the corners of the building was amazing."

WONDER what that guy would write if he could see Capt. Campbell come roaring down the Daytona sands in his Blue Bird at 245.73 miles an hour? Or if he had seen young Coan of Pennsy do the mile in 4:13 and Russ Chapman better 1:53 for the half?

THE OTHER NIGHT in Philadelphia Ray Conger loaned Sera Martin, the French flier, his shoes. Sera raced to victory in the Meadowbrook 600 in them after Ray had worn them in capturing the Wanamaker Mile.

At the first New York A. C. games in 1888 four athletes wore the same pair of shoes in six events. The only "spikes" in amateur circles then belonged to William B. Curtis. A professional sprinter named Davis had told "Pudd'n Bill" about them and Curtis had a pair made by an Irish shoemaker. Concerning those shoes the late James E. Sullivan once wrote:

"After Curtis had worn them in the 75-yard and 220-yard runs, H. J. Magraw used them in the quarter-mile and half-mile runs; Harry E. Buermeyer in the shot-putting, and finally, strangest of all, they carried J. E. Russell to victory in the one-mile walk."

DID YOU HEAR that OWNIE MADDEN, underworld baron, declares the Dundee-Harvey decision was in the bag, he knows who engineered it and will "get even"? That JIM McMILLEN, the wrestler, is "left eyed"? His port glimmer is 70 per cent stronger than his right? That LARRY BALDWIN of Yale scored 17 goals against Governor's Island in his varsity water polo debut Saturday? Isn't that a record?

June, the month of brides and graduations, will cost Notre Dame Capt. Tom Curley, right end, and two varsity guards, Metzger and Kassis.

Heavy Title Fight on June 19

Chicago, Feb. 17 (US)—Friday night, June 19, has been selected as the date of the world's heavyweight boxing championship match in which Max Schmeling of Germany will defend his title against W. L. (Young) Stribling of Georgia at Soldier Field, Chicago according to William F. Carey, president of the Madison Square Corp.

The Summer Milk Fund shows, which previously have been sponsored by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, have always been staged in June. June 19 was selected as the date for this year's production, it was pointed out, because it will precede by one day the American Derby, which is staged annually at the Washington Park race track.

Carey told friends before he left for New York that he would confer with Damon Runyon, director of the Milk Fund shows, some time this week and that he may have some important announcements ready following the conference.

Last Call for H-Y Ice Game Tickets

The Harvard Athletic Association announced all applications for the Harvard-Yale hockey game to be played at the Boston Garden, Feb. 28, will close at the offices of the association tomorrow at 5 p. m.

ONE CHANGE IN GRID RULES

New York, Feb. 17—The football rules for 1931 will remain the same as they were in 1930 except for a minor change. E. K. Hall, chairman of the football rules committee, reported the committee in agreement to let the rules stand at least for another year.

The one change was to remove the arbitrary award of point after touchdown, making the penalty for an offside the same as if the foul had been committed during any other scrimmage.

Under the new rule, if the defending team breaks the rules, it will be penalized half the distance to the goal line and the point tried over. If the attacking team is at fault, it will be penalized the usual five yards for offside play and again try the point from the seven-yard line.

Bass K. O.'s Taylor but Bout Goes on

The decision was awarded by referee Leo Houck, despite Taylor's claim that the blow was foul.

Bass started for his dressing room and Frank Weiner, chairman of the State Athletic Commission, jumped into the ring. He ordered that Taylor be given a brief rest and directed that Bass be brought back to continue fighting.

Regardless of what happened in the succeeding rounds, Weiner said, Bass would be credited with a knockout. The champion returned to the arena, and fought five more rounds "just as an exhibition to give the fans a break."

World's Fastest Whippets to Race

At the 19th annual Eastern Dog Club exhibition at Boston Garden next week nine of the fastest whippets in the world will take part in four races, the first series beginning Feb. 24, and the finals being run on the afternoon of Feb. 25.

If You Don't Know

Charlie Dryden, famous baseball writer, who died last week, would never attend World Series games . . . He was interested in the players he knew personally; not in the sport . . . Dartmouth may take the place of Yale as Harvard's greatest grid rival . . . Judging from track condition reports, the weather in New Orleans has been ideal this winter . . . Bill Carrigan may make a Southern trip this month, but not in a baseball capacity . . . The Lewiston squire is thinking seriously of attending the Maloney-Carnera bout at Miami . . . Johnny Igo, Hub's greatest baseball fan, will also forsake the Braves and Sox this year in favor of the Battle of the Palms . . . A press agent for the fight reports that money is so scarce in Miami that the restaurants are giving grapefruit free with every egg order . . . Art Ross isn't superstitious . . . He has just 13 active players on his Bruins' squad at this writing . . . Few hockey officials call a penalty for charging the goalie and all the boys are doing it . . . That's how New Haven beat the Tigers on Sunday night . . . There won't be a professional boxing show in Boston this week . . . Time was when there used to be three a week and each would make money.

Willis Re-elected Exeter Ice Captain

Exeter, N. H., Feb. 17—George K. Willis of Easthaven, Ct., was re-elected captain of the 1932 hockey team. He is one of the fastest forwards Exeter has had for many years.

Coach Percy C. Rogers will lose 10 of the 14 players on the squad this year, but those returning next season, besides Capt. Willis, are Arthur P. Duffey, Jr., of Arlington, Frederick Lawson at Dorchester and Stuart McKenzie of Wakefield.

TILDEN TO TALK AT FILENE'S

Big Bill Tilden has turned orator. Preliminary to his appearance against Karel Kozeluh in the Boston Garden Friday night, Tilden, long America's foremost tennis star, will speak at Filene's at 4:15 p. m., on "Tennis and Sportsmanship."

Big Bill will speak from the auditorium in Filene's Franklin-Hawley Building. No admission will be charged, but tickets can be obtained in the Sports Shop on the second floor in Filene's Men's Store.

Big Bill will orate on not only his own experiences, but also his impression of the present crop of outstanding amateurs. He will discuss, also, his views about the practice followed in the selection of the Davis Cup teams, with special reference to the 1931 team.

He will talk, too, about the training of young players, using his own case as an example.

Barney Oldfield Will Try Comeback

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 17 (INS)—Barney Oldfield, pioneer American racing car driver, will make his "comeback" on the Legion Ascot speedway here soon, track officials said today.

Ralph De Palma recently drove in a speedway race, and Louis Meyers, national racing champion in 1928 and 1929, will participate in the races scheduled for next Sunday.

Len Harvey to Meet Fields, March 13

New York, Feb. 17 (US)—Len Harvey, British middleweight champion, and Jackie Fields, of Los Angeles, former welterweight champion of the world, have been matched for a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden on March 13.

Harvey has lost his only two bouts in the United States to Vince Dundee, New Jersey middleweight.

Everett and Medford at Peace

Athletic relations between Medford and Everett high schools, which were severed a year and a half back, were resumed last night at a meeting of the Medford athletic board. Everett will play Medford in two baseball games this year.

Football teams of the schools will not meet until 1932. The baseball games between Everett and Medford are slated for May 8 at Medford and a return game on May 29 at Everett.

J. Stevens Kadesch, head of the Medford school board, recommended a change in the ruling which prevents Medford from playing games outside of the state.

Kadesch feels that a "mileage" ruling which would permit Medford to play such schools as Manchester, N. H., high or other outside state schools which are not an unreasonable distance from Medford would be sensible.

The Medford football schedule, with the exception of next year, follows: Sept. 26, Wakefield at Medford; Sept. 26, Brockton at Medford; Oct. 3, Medford at Lynn English; Oct. 10, Somerville at Medford; Oct. 17, Medford at Haverhill; Oct. 24, Salem at Medford; Oct. 31, open; Nov. 7, Medford at Waltham; Nov. 14, Revere at Medford; Nov. 26, Malden at Medford.

The baseball schedule: April 18, Woburn at Medford April 20, Medford at Malden; April 25, Medford at Somerville; April 28, Lynn English at Medford; April 29, Boston Trade at Medford; May 2, Medford at Haverhill; May 5, Everett at Medford; May 9, Medford at Lynn Classical; May 13, Arlington at Medford; May 16, Medford at Fitchburg; May 20, Somerville at Medford; May 23, open; May 27, Brockton at Medford; May 29, Medford at Everett; June 2, Medford at Lynn English; June 6, Malden at Medford.

By BILL GRIMES

Fighting to avenge their defeat in New York, the Bruins will bring all of their heavy artillery into action against the Americans tonight at the Boston Garden.

About a month ago, Eddie Gerard's charges set the Bruins back on their haunches in a rough and tumble battle in Madison Square Garden. From start to finish, it was a brisling battle, featured by heavy body checking and fisticuffs.

Although the Bruins have never taken kindly to defeat, their chagrin was bitter over the New York setback and they will bear down with every available ounce of pressure tonight.

Manager Eddie Gerard has been a miracle man with the Americans. Although his roster is replete with castoffs from other N. H. L. clubs, Gerard has made the Americans a factor in the race for Canadian division honors.

Americans Battle to Hold Third Place

At present, the Americans are in third place, by the slant margin of one point over the Maroons. The Americans have opened up under Gerard and although they are by no means the best scoring outfit in the Calder loop, they now give the fans an interesting brand of offensive hockey.

The Bruins have not met with defeat since their last game with the Americans and in the interim they have taken the measures of Philadelphia, Rangers, Detroit, Canadiens, Chicago and Maroons, but were held by the Hawks.

They are installed in first place of the American division to the extent of four games, with little or no likelihood of being displaced, as only 11 games remain to be played, seven of which will be decided at the Garden.

Schaaf Knocks Out Daniels in First

Minneapolis, Feb. 17 — Ernie Schaaf, Boston sailor, scored a spectacular one-round knockout over Dick Daniels of this city, in what was to have been a 10-round, no decision bout.

Daniels was on the mat three times before he finally took the count from a fierce right hand wallop by the Hub fighter. Three men recently fought 10 rounds in Boston, the presence of Jack Sharkey in Schaaf's corner, drew a capacity throng.

In the semifinal, Art Lasky, Minneapolis, defeated Mike Mandell, St. Paul.

PENN STAR DETHRONES CONGER AS MILE KING

COAN COVERS DISTANCE IN 4:13

New York, Feb. 17 (US)—Brilliant, dazzling, like a comet streaking across the sky to astonish the world, a Philadelphia boy named Carl Coan encompassed the downfall of Ray Conger, king of the milers, at Madison Square Garden in the annual New York Athletic Club track games.

The daring of a running genius and the mastery of an experienced artist were combined by Coan, a third-year student at the University of Pennsylvania, as he covered the mile in 4 minutes 13 seconds and ran Conger into the Garden's well-worn pine boards while 12,000 spectators shouted in strident notes at his heroics. They love to see a champion fall.

This was the same Conger that was unbeatable over a stretch of 12 indoor mile races in the past three seasons, but this was a Coan such as no one—not even his coach, Lawson Robertson—expected to see.

Coan Snatches Lead 55 Yards From Tape

Running last in a four-man field until two laps, or 220 yards, from the finish, Coan came from behind to fight Conger doggedly in a reckless sprint till he took the lead 55 yards from the tape.

Carrying his burst of speed all the way to the tape, Coan completed the fourth fastest indoor mile ever run and the fastest indoor mile since Lloyd Hahn's 4:12 1-3 in 1927.

The 4:12 record races of Paavo Nurmi, the Finn, and Joie Ray, the American, in 1923 are the only others that excelled Coan's downright bewildering performance.

Because this victory encompassed the downfall of the sleepyeyed schoolmaster who has dominated his field ruthlessly for three past four years, it overshadowed another startling achievement—a 1:52 4-5 half-mile by Russell Chapman of Bates College.

It was the second fastest half-mile of indoor history, surpassed only by Hahn's 1:51 3-5 on the "faster" intercollegiate track.

Conger Wilts at End and Finishes Third

Yet Coan's performance stood alone. It was designed handsomely, and so crushed Conger, still wearing the Illinois A. C. injection that he wilted in the last few strides and was beaten to the tape by Gene Venzke, Swedish-American A. C. runner.

Venzke was four yards in back of Coan, Conger only inches behind her back, almost on the verge of collapse. George Bullwinkle, City College's intercollegiate mile champion, the pace-maker for a half-mile, was fourth and last, a full 30 yards out of it.

B. C.-H. C. TO PLAY NOV. 28

"The Boston College-Holy Cross football game will be played at Fenway Park, Boston, on the original date scheduled for the game, November 28, despite the many rumors that the game had been shifted to Fitton Field, Worcester, or that the date had been changed to Thanksgiving Day morning."

This statement was issued by John P. Curley, graduate manager of athletics at Boston College. The reason for the decided change was the fact that the Dartmouth-Stanford intersectional game will be played at the Stadium on the same date.

A second suggestion that the B. C.-Cross game be played Thanksgiving morning was also vetoed by the Boston College authorities who refused on the grounds that it would interfere with the schoolboy games.

Dr. Drury Called in as Johnson Weakens

St. Louis, Feb. 17 (AP)—Dr. Robert Drury of Columbus, O., former pastor of the late Ted Sod, arrived here today for a consultation on the condition of Ban Johnson, former president of the American League, who is seriously ill at St. John's hospital.

Dr. Drury was formerly Johnson's personal physician. Hospital attendants said Johnson was "about the same" today.

GOODFELLOW, MORENZ TIE

Montreal, Que., Feb. 17 (AP)—Howie Morenz of the Montreal Canadiens has boosted himself into a tie with Ebbie Goodfellow of Detroit in the race for individual scoring honors of the National Hockey League.

Averages, including games of Sunday night, give the two centerice players 37 point: each. Bill Cook of the New York Rangers is third with 31, while Weiland of Boston, Boucher of the Rangers, and Stewart of Montreal are tied for fourth place with 28.

Bill Cook has scored the most goals, and Joe Primeau of Toronto the most assists. Ace Harvey Rockburn, Detroit, became the first player to pass the century mark in penalties. He has served 108 minutes.

Figures for the leaders:

Passing the Puck

Until this season, the New York Americans were never a worthwhile attraction around the N. H. L. circuit. Eddie Gerard has opened up the American attack and this move, coupled with the fact that the wearers of the stars and stripes are a heavy body-checking outfit, has greatly improved their status with the fans.

As the Americans are only a half-game in front of the Maroons, the outcome of tonight's tilt with the Bruins may be of great importance to the New Yorkers. Fortunately for the Gerards, the Maroons are engaged in one of the intra-city affairs with Les Canadiens this evening.

Billy Burch is staging a fine comeback this season. For a couple of seasons it was feared that the veteran was through with the game, but he is now tied with Norman Rines as the leading goal getter on the Americans' roster, having scored 12 times.

George Owen was born in Hamilton, Ont., and learned his hockey in Newton, while Billy Burch was born in Yonkers, N. Y., and gained his knowledge of the game in Hamilton, Ont.

Judging from the reports of the Cube-Eagle game in New Haven, the home players were guilty of charging Goalie Benny Grant on various occasions.

On the roster of the New York Americans are former Hawks, Falcons, Canadiens, Pirates and Maroons. Any manager who can keep a bunch of discarded players up in the fight is deserving of much credit.

Manager Eddie Powers is drilling his Cubs strenuously for the Arrows' game Saturday night at the Boston Arena. It will be the Cubs' first appearance at home since they came under their new ownership, and a large crowd will be on hand to welcome the new regime.

Although Dutch Gainor is improving, it is doubtful if he will be able to return to the Bruin lineup for at least a week. The loss of Gainor is a blow to the Bruins, for the clever wing man is a play maker par excellence.

Any of the N. H. L. players who are sent to the Can-Am League for seasoning, and who labor under the impression that they can burn up that organization, should be examined.

Now that Art Ross is a magnate in the Can-Am League watch for expansion. There should be at least eight other clubs in the league in order to make it a worthwhile organization. Albany, Newark and Rochester would be ideal cities for Can-Am clubs.

Circling after an attack had been checked was the only weakness Bill Morton, the Dartmouth iron man, displayed against Harvard. This can easily be rectified, and, once it is, Morton will be one of the best college players in the game.

Capt. Hank Johnson and Hal Andrea will both be graduated from Dartmouth next June and they will be available for amateur clubs if these parts next season.

Manager Art Ross has nothing but the highest praise for the manner with which Win Green handles the Bruins on trips during his absence. Win has been the good agent of the Bruins on the two recent Montreal trips and he is the most efficient "Junior" the Bruins have had.

JOHNSON WILL BOX SCOZZA

By RINGSIDE

Matchmaker Eddie Muck of the Argonne A. A. today filed contracts with the State Boxing Commission calling for a 10-round bout between Larry Johnson of Chicago and Lou Scozza of Buffalo at the New Boston Arena a week from Thursday night.

Bouts for Novices at St. Joe's Tourney

The St. Joe's T. A. Society's amateur boxing tournament at Mechanics Building on Saturday night will be restricted to novices. Father Bill Cuddy says a large number of entries have been received and that there will be at least 40 bouts.

Diamond Belt Finals Next Monday Night

Classes for the finals in the diamond belt tournament of the Irish American A. C. next Monday night will be at 125, 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and 175 pounds and in the heavyweight division.

The trial bouts in the diamond belt tournament brought out some promising boys, and it is expected that the finals will furnish all kinds of red hot action.

British Girl Ties for Florida Medal

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 17—Miss Diana Fishwick started an invasion of the United States by British women golfers by scoring a 78 to tie for the medal in the qualifying round of the Florida women's championship.

Mrs. Stuart Hanley of Detroit made a similar score and she and the English girl will head the first flight as match play begins today.

Miss Virginia Van Wie, Chicago, who twice before has won the tournament, was two strokes behind the leaders with 41—39—80, followed by Mrs. Helen Hicks, Hewlett, L. I., with an 81.

England and Africa Cricket Match Draw

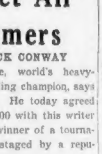
Johannesburg, South Africa, Feb. 17 (AP)—The fourth test match between England and South Africa ended in a draw today. England made 422 for first innings and 169 for nine wickets declared. South Africa scored 203 for first innings and 280 for seven wickets close.

George Will Meet All Comers

By JACK CONWAY

Ed George, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, says money talks. He today agreed to post $10,000 with this writer to meet the winner of a tournament to be staged by a reputable promoter.

The only stipulation he made was that the tournament be opened to any heavyweight wrestler in the world who will post $5000 to guarantee his appearance.



Jack Conway

"I won the world's heavyweight title when I toured Gus Sonnenburg in a bout in Los Angeles," said George. "Before I entered professional wrestling, I was A. A. U. champion and a member of the American Olympic team. As an amateur, I took on all comers and defeated them.

"I intend to follow the same policy as heavyweight wrestling champion of the world. I have heard a great deal of talk about Eastern and Western wrestling wheels, cliques and combinations.

"Personally I am independent of any group in the wrestling game. I am ready to post $10,000 with you to meet the winner of a tournament to be staged by a reputable promoter. All I ask is that each man who enters the tournaments post $5000 that he will appear against opponents picked by the promoter. If a man is unwilling to post $5000 he shows a lack of good faith.

"This plan will give every heavyweight wrestler in the world an opportunity to shoot for my title. Perhaps some unknown will batter his way into the final match.

"I stand ready to meet all comers. Now let the boys prove that they are good they are on the mat."

George Proves He Is a Real Champion

George's offer is the best sporting proposition this writer has heard in 10 years. It stamps him as a title holder who has a right to tackle all comers. It also dispels all claims that George will only meet one group of wrestlers.

George's record is rich with wrestling history. His first claim to fame as a member of the wrestling team connected with the University of Michigan. He also won the Michigan State championships, then the A. A. U. title and later was a member of the American Olympic team.

George has carried the high ideals he gained in amateur wrestling into the pro field.

The new title holder smashed precedent when he consented to tackle all comers. In the past, many of our wrestling champions have only taken on hand picked opponents.

In agreeing to meet the winner of a tournament George is complying with the insistence of the fans regularity. Even though he should lose his title, he will at least have proved he had the courage of his convictions.

The champion will take on Nick Lutze of California in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the New Boston Arena on Thursday night. Lutze may knock the proposed tournament right out of the picture by tossing George.

SURETTE, LEOMINSTER BOY, WINS HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE

Henry Surette, Leominster heavyweight, won the Massachusetts State championship in the annual tournament, which was held at the Boston Arena before 3500 spectators.

Mass. Amateur Boxing Champs

158-POUND CLASS
Jimmy Canney, Cambridge
175-POUND CLASS
Paul McNamara, Boston.
HEAVYWEIGHTS
Henry Surette, Leominster.

Champions were crowned in eight classes.

Surette won the crown, when he defeated Frank Carlo of Everett in three rounds, although the fans staged a demonstration of protest against the decision. Surette beat Louis Acker of Bridgewater in his first bout while Carlo drew a bye.

Another crown was awarded when Louis Silva, of Taunton, defeated Albert Synnott of Fall River in the second round in the 112-pound class. Referee Martin stopping the bout.

It was 5" a third victory. Synnott had scored two victories, but he found Silva a more formidable opponent than either of the men he outpointed.

Jimmy Canney of Cambridge emerged victorious in the final 160-pound bout, in which he had for his opponent Stanley Koss of Taunton. Canney was awarded the decision at the conclusion of the third round. He had but one battle prior to his clash with Koss, for he drew a bye, while Koss had engaged in two semi contests.

The dope was upset in the final event of the 175-pound class on the showing Howard Range of North Easton made in a preceding event, and few gave Paul McNamara a chance for the crown.

Paul upset the calculations of the ringsiders by wading in and battering the southpaw to the floor in fast time.

SAVOLDI HURTS 1ST OPPONENT

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 17 (INS)—A dislocated shoulder today reminded Don Delong, French wrestling champion, of the line-crashing tactics displayed here by "Jumping Joe" Savoldi, former Notre Dame football star, when the latter made his debut last night by throwing Delong for two consecutive falls in less than 13 minutes. Savoldi was paid $3500 for his 13-minute effort.

Body slams, the first coming after 4 minutes and 30 seconds of the second after 4 minutes and 2 seconds, gave the former halfback both falls. Delong lay prone for several minutes on the ring floor after the last fall.

Physicians who examined the French champ after the bout found a dislocated shoulder, which necessitated the wrestler's removal to a hospital.

Dartmouth Will Drop Water Polo

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 17—Despite the fact that Dartmouth's water polo team is undefeated this year, the Green will abandon the sport next year and will also resign from the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Association, according to an announcement by Harry Heneage, supervisor of athletics.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Two factors cause cutting at the ball, and one augments the other. In the first place, the man who plays golf only occasionally has muscles which are unaccustomed to the pulling, pushing violence promoted by the exertion of swinging the golf club well through to hit the ball. His muscles resist all efforts at coordinated work—and quit. He, therefore, cannot be able to make his muscles do the work he calls upon them for. Now this pulling and twisting of the muscles as you swing through is caused by the fact that the club head, when you reach the limit of arm-reach, as you go into the ball has attained its greatest speed. It is moving fast—no doubt about that. Therefore, when it swings your wrists straight out toward the ball it exerts a very considerable pull or pressure, and at this point you must be careful to keep smooth.

VALENTINO TALKS TO EARTH FROM LAND OF SPIRITS

VALENTINO TALKED—or his spirit did, according to a psychic expert. Intimate information is to be divulged. For the great Valentino has "chatted" with George Wehner, noted medium.

THE GREAT LOVER, Rudy, is shown here with Vilma Banky, in one of the hundreds of love scenes that the screen showed in his day. Contending that not even death is a barrier to love, the psychic experts declare the bond of love must still reach the film star. It's claimed that reaching "Rudy" is less difficult because of love power.

many trained minds are intent upon psychic research. There are numbers of men and women in the world who claim to have familiar spirits, which are now called spirit guides, and amazing phenomena occur in the presence of these unusual men and women. The actual truth is little known. That is why psychic researchers are so intent upon their problem.

I was deeply interested when confronted with a request from an editor to establish communication with Valentino and to induce him to answer a number of questions which had been submitted by readers. Instantly I recognized the fact that the great motion picture actor offered an exceptional chance for the success of such an attempt. Millions loved him when he was alive and millions still think of him with love and admiration.

Makes No Promise
Willing to Try but Can't Vouch for Results

Valentino dealt in love, and the people of the world felt that divine thrill through his craftsmanship. And love binds more tightly than any bond that human hands can impose. If you doubt, ask the philosophers of the ages and seek the truth in your own hearts.

Love knows no barriers—not even death! The bond of love must still reach the idol of the people in the land of mystery. Communication should be less difficult than with almost any other person. I agreed to make the attempt.

"But, I said, "I have studied such things for many years and know too much to promise success. I can only make some suggestions and write an account of what happens."

The editor nodded gravely and placed before me the questions which the readers of his publication wished Valentino to answer. I was alarmed by the third question! "How did you die? Were any of the rumors of shooting and poisoning at all justified?" My mind went back to the tragic end of the famous screen artist and I thought of those sensational rumors which had been in circulation at the time.

Has Free Hand
So Arrangements for the Seances Are Completed

Suppose that we should actually reach the man we sought. What would be the result if his mind were suddenly focused upon his own terrible end? Violence sometimes occurs at seances. And, then, what might the answer be to such a question? What?

"The third question must be moved to the bottom of the list," I said firmly. "It is dangerous. It might break up the seance."

Again the editor nodded gravely and I realized that I was to have a free hand. It only remained to decide upon the medium and to arrange for his services. After considerable thought I selected George Wehner.

George Wehner is well known to the public because of his book, "A Curious Life," and because of his many interesting magazine articles dealing with psychic matters. I have sat with him in seances upon a number of occasions and I have good reason to believe that he is thoroughly honest. He is capable of remaining in a state of trance for hours at a time, and upon these occasions I have sometimes heard him speak words which would seem impossible to emanate from other than the minds of people who had died.

Of course any trance medium says much, when in trance, which might arise in his own subconscious mind and in the minds of those who are sitting in the circle. Nor can he be held accountable for what he says.

A genuine trance medium does not know what he says during the seance any more than a hypnotized subject knows what happens during his state of hypnosis. Perhaps he speaks from his own subconscious mind, from the minds of the sitters and—from the minds of the dead! Why not?

In Soft Light
Stenographer Insists She Will Not Be Afraid

The evening of the seance arrived. The great experiment was to be made in the huge photographic studio of the publication. Studio lights and cameras were shoved against the walls. In the center of the room was arranged a circle of comfortable chairs.

A particularly large and comfortable chair was reserved for the medium, who sometimes bangs his head unmercifully against the chair when entering the state of trance or when convulsed with emotions during that trance. Only a soft light prevailed, enough for me to read the questions and for the pretty stenographer who sat behind the medium's chair.

I was a little afraid, on account of the stenographer. She might get nervous and forget to take down Valentino's words—if Valentino communicated! She told me that it was her first seance, but that she was not the least bit afraid. Girls of today have courage.

Goes Into Trance
His Head Wobbles and Then He Begins to Whistle

Wehner entered and took his place in the great chair. He asked for a glass of water. Water is usually drank by mediums just before entering the trance condition. While the water was being brought I studied him. He seemed a trifle nervous, which is only natural for a man who is sincere when about to perform in an unconscious condition.

I glanced around the circle. Ruth Roland, motion picture actress, sat opposite the medium. She is was who had known Valentino intimately. Was she about to talk with him again? Mostly, the editors present were silent, waiting. There was a tenseness. Nobody knew what was going to happen.

The glass of water was brought. Wehner drank half of it and leaned his head back against the chair. His eyes closed and he appeared to be asleep. There was silence. Nobody wanted to talk. Psychic investigation is a serious matter.

Wehner seemed so quiet and restful that a contrast flashed into my mind. Once, high up in a room of the Anscnia hotel, I had seen this same medium try to throw himself through the window into the street. I am athletic myself and a stronger man helped me catch him just before he flung himself against the glass of the window.

At the moment his body was supposed to be in the possession of a man who had committed suicide and it seemed as though the departed entity wished to repeat his fatal deed. It was only by a bit of luck that we were in time to avert a second tragedy that evening.

Suddenly, amid the silence of the big studio, the medium jerked his head violently against the side of his chair. His face became contorted and his lips twitched.

George Wehner was entering the state of trance. From side to side his head jerked and wobbled, while an expression of agony flitted on and off his face. After a period there came more restfulness and then—the music!

The medium's cheeks puffed out. His lips pursed. He began to whistle. And such whistling! The tones were dulcet, throbbing, beautiful beyond ordinary whistling. I had heard this whistling before and I knew that Wehner's body was now supposed to be inhabited by a musician named Frank, who had been a flute player and who had died in Detroit.

Soon the whistling stopped and the medium leaned forward in his chair, eyes closed, head sagging. From his mouth the alleged Frank spoke in a strained voice to several in the circle. The medium's hand rose weakly and pointed toward Ruth Roland.

THE TWELVE QUESTIONS

At the seance described in the accompanying article by R. T. M. Scott these twelve questions to Rudolph Valentino were submitted through George Wehner, the medium:

Does a person on this earth need to be psychic in order to communicate with a person who has died, and does such a communication have to pass through a medium?

If you had lived, would you have gone into the talkies?

What is the relation of husband and wife in the spirit world? Are they together or aren't those things important?

Is one immediately cured after death of the disease from which he died?

Do people ever return to this world as ghosts, perhaps?

Can you communicate with anyone as you would like, or must you be sent by a higher power?

Are you thoroughly settled in your present sphere or will you move on to other places?

Who is, in your opinion, the greatest film star today?

Have you ever returned to haunt your house in Hollywood?

Had you any premonition that you were going to die?

Do you see Lon Chaney? What film folk are your friends now in spirit land?

HOW DID YOU DIE? WAS THERE ANY JUSTIFICATION IN THE RUMORS OF SHOOTING OR POISONING?

Mother's Voice
Says She Will Go and Valentino Will Come

FRANK: You also love music?

RUTH ROLAND: I like all music.

FRANK: I hear the vibrations of singing. Did you sing at one time?

RUTH ROLAND: Yes, I do sing?

FRANK: Mezzo?

RUTH ROLAND: No. Contralto.

FRANK: But you could sing mezzo! You have a very wide range. I can feel the vibrations.

RUTH ROLAND: Yes, I have quite a wide range.

There was silence and the medium's head rested against the chair. His eyes were closed and his face was still, except for a little twitching. The stenographer ceased writing and peered curiously at the strange expression upon the medium's face. None knew what might come next.

"How, everybody!"

It was he voice of an Indian that boomed out unexpectedly. He talked of mountains and trees and water to various sitters in the circle. This, undoubtedly, was Whitecloud, the alleged control or spirit guide of the medium. (I use the word "alleged" in the interest of exact truth and not in any disrespect to the medium.)

For minutes Whitecloud talked about the great open spaces of the country and about people who had died. It is a pity that space prohibits a full transcription. Finally silence came again.

Then came a hesitating voice, the alleged voice speaking through the medium of Gabrielo, the mother of Valentino. She spoke a few words to me:

GABRIELO: You wait for my son?

THE WRITER: I do.

GABRIELO: I am his madre.

THE WRITER: Is your boy coming to us tonight? We shall be very grateful to him if he does.

GABRIELO: Si, senor. These are friends?

THE WRITER: Yes.

GABRIELO: (To Ruth Roland) I never know you in the earth world, but I know you because I saw you talking to my boy. Rudolfo will be pleased. I will go now and he will come. Buona notte.

In the second installment of this absorbing narrative in tomorrow's issue the author will tell the answers to the questions prepared for submission to Valentino as uttered at the seance by Wehner, the medium.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

which 'X' was so carefully polishing in all the contrived circumstances. Here was a real problem, unique in crime, I believe, yet 'X' met it with consummate skill.

"Accordingly the murder was committed on Christmas Eve in a featherneon exactly as scheduled. I will give you the details of this in just a minute. But let me leap ahead for a moment. A few days after Christmas, Doctor Maskell leaves town suddenly, mysteriously, without an explanation. Why? 'X' knew perfectly well—the secret trip to Reno preparatory to getting a divorce. It was this romance which hastened the crime. All of these plans, coincidental as they may seem at first glance really show why the crime was committed at just this time. 'X' seized the opportunity because it was necessary. If Felise and the doctor were married, the reason for the crime itself would cease to be.

"'X' knew that the doctor would return on January 4. In the meantime, no one would be visiting the house on Peddler's road. Therefore, all that time the body of Geraldine Foster lay washing in the tub of tannic acid. But on the night of January 3, some one in the neighborhood is willing to testify they saw a light in the house. That was the night 'X' returned there and buried the body, single-handed.

Pigeon Clue

"Therefore the medical examiner was right when he said the body had been in the grave for 36 hours. But the pigeons had given me a clue, which the autopsy substantiated. The girl had been in the grave 36 hours, but she was killed on December 24. It had been the design of 'X' to make it seem that Geraldine had been killed on January 3, when Dr. Maskell could not account for his movements. Here great clevemess came into play.

"'X' figured that the doctor could be lured to some place where he had no means of proving that he was, then the police would believe that he was lying, and the full result would be accomplished. Accordingly, on January 4, he received a telephone call. He was told that it was Geraldine Foster talking—he believed it and he was further told that if he would come to her at once he could save her from great trouble.

"She seemed ready to commit suicide. The doctor was an impulsive man and went to keep the assignment. He said that he was to meet her at the Pelham entrance to Bronx Park. He went there and waited for two hours and saw no one. But such was his isolated position that no one who knew him saw him there.

"That made the doctor's story look fishy to us, and the District Attorney wisely laid stress on it, just as 'X' intended, he should.

"But the tannic acid ruse had not worked. It never does. The Medical Examiners, when they make the autopsy, are certain sooner or later to discover the fraud. And then, the snails in the stomach of Geraldine Foster were conclusive. It might have looked as if all this magnificent plot of 'X' had failed, or at least the prepared case against the doctor greatly weakened, simply because the police almost instantly found out the exact time of the murder.

"But here that strange element of chance which had played against the real killer now changed sides and helped in the plot. We knew that Geraldine Foster had been killed on Christmas Eve. But that did not help the doctor, for his Christmas Eve alibi was just as defective as the one of January 4. The killer had first meant to lure him there directly, in which case no tannic acid would have been necessary.

"After Mrs. Westcok delivered the message, the doctor called Mrs. Morgan—because he was suspicious. They arranged to meet, but the husband returned unexpectedly and Mrs. Morgan could not leave her apartment. Doctor Maskell, in an auction room, had no alibi, and he would not betray the lady when we questioned him about it. We had to find her through the pillow case which had been deliberately put over the head of the victim, because the killer remembered the Anna Aumuller case and knew exactly what the police would do with that."

"A gruesome enough scheme," remarked George Maskell, with a glance at the Police Commissioner.

"'X' decided to leave nothing to chance. If anything went wrong with the tannic acid, it must be shown that Doctor Maskell had tried to fix an alibi for himself, and that he bought the chemical. Accordingly, at the proper time, a telephone call was made to the Wisner pharmacy. The druggist was told that Doctor Maskell wished three large bottles of tannic acid, and they must be delivered before 2 o'clock in the afternoon. This was done, and two of these bottles, missing from the doctor's office, were found in the brush near the house on Peddler's Road. Moreover, a witness was found who saw Geraldine Foster leaving the office carrying these two bottles—her own embalming fluid."

"How horrible and fantastic—almost unbelievable, Mr. Commissioner," said Natalie Maskell.

"At a little after three o'clock that afternoon, 'X' arrived at the office of Doctor Maskell. I do not know what passed between those two, but it is not hard to guess. A woman came to Geraldine Foster with a pretended message, a summons from Doctor Maskell.

College Frat Rum Raid "Outrageous"

Chicago, Feb. 17 (INS)—The closing of five University of Michigan fraternities following a liquor raid was "outrageous, tactless and pointless," the Daily Maroon, University of Chicago newspaper, says today.

"Were fraternities here raided and searched liquor would be found," it says. "The same can be said of every other university in the Big Ten. Why, then, Michigan? Politics of some sort was involved."

Aimee Plans to Build Temple in Shanghai

Shanghai, Feb. 17 (AP)—Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, while leading a meeting here today announced she was seeking property in Shanghai for a miniature Angelus Temple.

Only a fraction of the listeners understood English. A movie camera recorded the service. Occasionally Mrs. McPherson took a Chinese baby in her arms as it toddled before the pulpit.

Postal Head Taken to Task by Moffett

Washington, Feb. 17 (INS)—Postmaster-General Brown was reproved today by Rear-Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of naval aeronautics, for his statement to a group of airmail operators that military officials speak with contempt about any aid that might be given by commercial aviation in time of war.

25 Killed by Autos

Hartford, Ct., Feb. 17 (INS)—Twenty-five deaths by motor vehicles were reported to the State Motor Vehicle Department in January, 1931, as compared with 19 in January, 1930.

NOW COMES Greenwich Village to enliven the drama with its gin, its genius and its gentlemanly irresponsibility. And if "Up Pops the Devil" at the Wilbur does not clutch at your throat and your heart at the same time, the emotion of the playgoer must surely be regarded as a receding quality. This merry little comedy by Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich is not all fun by any means, although its humors are numerous and fond hopes.

FOR THE FIRST time, at least, you are permitted to join in the frivolities of the upstart literary set and measure its satellites, on face value. Your compositores in the story are irre sponsible as well as irresponsible just young sters with a dreamy ambition, but unways halted by too much ronvivinity. Out of the evening's performance come some of the best laughs the theater has encountered for months; and out of the same performance filtered some of life's most bitter fruits. Imagine, if you can, a girl "living in sin" going back to the doctor enamored of his ways and means for her lover's existence while he is away and write a novel. Sounds silly, of course, but it is far from that in the tragic unfolding.

Nicholas Young

AND WITH ALL the cardonic irony that moves hand in hand with these two devoted souls, with all their self-inflicted misery, there flows as mellow a ripple of comedy as you may ever expect to discover in that dimly recognized region known as Greenwich Village. The story is made up of other starving but aspiring geniuses; kept women and kept men; gin and high jinks. Out of this tangle emerge human beings of good report and of rather engaging manner. It is the old-fashioned love story brought back to the stage, given a metropolitan setting and sprinkled with electric lights and a natural tendency for strong liquor. Even if wet, it is comical; though nourished in environment, it is grippingly human. It isn't half as bad as it sounds; nor any more wicked than you would care to have it.

IN CHARACTERIZATION, the authors have drawn heavily upon exactly the kind of dwellers the popular magazines inform you are the life and energy of Greenwich Village. If you have never met them before, you will recognize them in "Up Pops the Devil"—that is if you read True Stories, the Red Book and the Sunday magazine sections. For the most important labors in this delicate function, you will find Roger Pryor and Sally Bates, each a valiant crusader in the delicate art of making a good role better. Mr. Pryor and Miss Bates bear the heavy burden of the play's quaint philosophy; each suffers in turns and each yields when there seems nothing else to do.

WHAT THE AUTHORS have particularly succeeded in bringing about is a brilliant galaxy of just the type of boys and girls all as it was mentioned in the first paragraph, wholesomely enlivening.

Danforth-D'Aranyi

A joint recital will be presented in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, March 15. Yelly d'Aranyi, the celebrated Hungarian violinist, will then appear with Pauline Danforth.

Continuing Shows

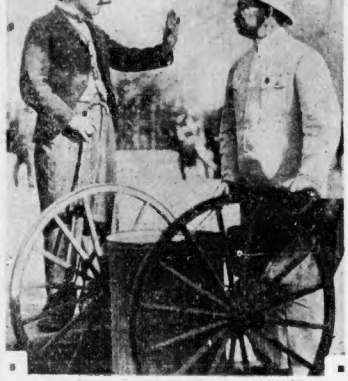
Silence Is Golden Here



CHARLIE CHAPLIN IN "CITY LIGHTS"

CHARLIE MAKES IT plain here he will stand for no talk from any street cleaner. The Boston premiere of "City Lights" will be at the Tremont Friday night.

KNOCKOUT THE REAL THING

All of the secrets as to just what does go on in the dressing rooms adjoining an arena are revealed by the comedian, with nothing left to the imagination.

Chaplin pulls back the partition between the training quarters and the auditorium to bring to the screen some of the possibilities and probabilities in the realm of fistiana, according to his conception. In so doing he enacts the character of a fighter and the one with whom he becomes embroiled is portrayed by Hank Mann. These two actually go into the ring and engage each other for several rounds in what is declared the most side-splitting exhibition of the art of self-defense ever to have taken place on or off the screen.

Although this bout was staged solely for "City Lights" and before a gathering of 800 or more men, who were paid to watch it, it is believed it would rock the biggest stadium in the world if it became an actual event.

Some of the fighters to assist Chaplin in the realism of this particular highlight of the production include the three well known giant heavyweights, Tony Stabenau, "Sugar" Willie Keeler and the colored Victor Alexander; Kid Warner, Joe Herrick, Jon Ritchie, Sailor Vincent, Eddie McAuliffe, Cy Slocum and the heavyweight wrestler, Ad Herman.

HOME TALENT AT SCOLLAY

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Elinion A. Vinson, who has a magic way about him in building up stage shows, gives home town talent a chance among his stars in this week's vaudeville offering at his Scollay theater. For a return engagement comes that noted columnist, George C. MacKinnon of the Boston Daily Record; and he proves even better than he was at first sight several weeks ago. He turns in a surprisingly good singing voice, and one can predict that with time he will have this faculty as one of his best footlight assets. His does very well indeed; and the lines he has composed are good enough for many laughs.

Jimmie Callanan, whom Mr. MacKinnon introduced as an office boy from the Record editorial rooms, gave the audience a decidedly unexpected treat. Instead of being amateurish, other than for an evident self-consciousness which will wear away, this youth tap-danced in clever fashion, and actually stopped the show. Other Bostonians on the bill were Charles Forsythe, first aide to Mr. MacKinnon in the funmaking, and Miss Alice Siemens, who was much applauded during her artistic dance.

For headliner from outside came the Princess Wahletka, who scored big in her psychic act. Other good ones were Gloria Grafton, the Blossom Sisters; the Four Poios; Warner, Laurie and Margie; the Miller Sisters, and the always snappy Scollayettes. It's a tiptop show, and Mr. Vinson again merits the credit.

'SPEED GIRLS' AT HOWARD

At the Howard are the "Speed Girls," with an abundance of talent and merriment. This organization has Fred Binder and Mike Sacks. The two big nances were "the Two Dukes" and "The Wise Judge." The producation is staged by Billy Koud. Miss Dix caught the fancy of the house and Adeline Parks shared with the honors. Frances Farr was another favorite. Alice Kennedy scored a hit, Harry Cornell, Frank Damzel, and Johnny Cook added pep to the show. The Fashion Parade by the chorus was effective.

In addition to the burlesque, the Old Reward had vaudeville and picture hits. The Three Castles, Wilson Kepple and Betty, and Fonsa, Regal and Richards Trio in "Vaudeville Varieties" won favor. The pictures offer Richard Dix in "Lovers Ins Ladies"; also "Royal Romance" and other films.

Organ Novelty on Met Bill Thursday

Arthur Mariel and Esther Newcombe are to present an unusual organ novelty at the Metropolitan beginning Thursday, in which they will demonstrate how bridge is viewed from the musical standpoint. The offering is termed "Modern Bridge." The offering is Mr. Mariel's own composition and is written to show you some alleged bridge players in action.

Waldron's Casino

At Waldron's Casino the burlesque feature which started yesterday is Lavedа Gordon and her "Happy Days" burlesquers. Kurly Kelly, Caroline Purcelle, Jane Vitale and Minnie Rowland hold up their end in dancing novelties. The comedy men include Ben Lerner, Jack Erickson, Sid Gold, George Brennan and Sam Goodman. The vaudeville features include the Tocsin Trio, Flavia, and Mann and Vooman.

HELEN HAYES OFFERED BIG FILM ROLE BY M-G-M

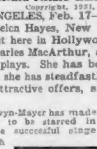
By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor for Universal Service

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 17—An interesting deal is now under way with Helen Hayes, New York actress. Little Miss Hayes has been out here in Hollywood time and time again with her husband, Charles MacArthur, author of "Front Page" and other well known plays. She has been invited many times to play in pictures but she has steadfastly refused to so much as listen to the many attractive offers, saying that her place was on the stage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has made her an offer to be featured in "Lullaby," the successful stage play which they recently purchased. In fact, Miss Hayes has been interested in M. G. M.'s play that she has some of her friends in New York that everything is set but actually putting her name to the document. Here is hoping it will come to Hollywood.



Louella O. Parsons

DOLORES COSTELLO BARRYMORE, who returns to the screen after two years' absence, will not, after all, be starred in "We Three," as her first. At the time I stated it would bring her back to Warners I said this had been explicitly bought for her. Apparently the powers that be at Warners feel an unpublished novel by Wilson Collison, gives Dolores a more appropriate vehicle. Loretta Young will be the feminine interest in "We Three." Ben Lyon, who finishes with Gloria Swanson this week, will be featured with Miss Costello. "The Passionate Sonata" will be directed by Hobart Henley and is now being adapted to the screen by Harvey Thew and Arthur Caesar. "We Three" is by Edith Ellis Fitzgerald and is being adapted by Florence Ryerson. It's a dramatic story and will give both Loretta and Ben a splendid opportunity.

WHEN I GET retired from the newspaper business because of old age, notice I say old age because I don't want to leave you if I am so old I can't see the keys of my typewriter, I am going to get a job as a director. I am not bragging, honestly, I am not, but about four weeks ago I saw Clara Wilder lunching with Arthur Hornblow at the Embassy. I remarked I thought it was possible that King Vidor might direct "Street Scene." Then nothing came of it and later Howard Hawks was mentioned as the one Samuel Goldwyn had in mind. Saturday the rumor was hot again that Samuel Goldwyn who has always had a high regard for King Vidor, would borrow him from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Sam, by the way, reaches home Sunday night. Now watch the wheels go round at United Artists Studios.

TRAVELING AROUND town we hear that Dolores Del Rio is well and eager to get back to the screen. That William Seiter will direct "Waiting at the Church" for Radio in place of Mel Brown. That Howard Estabrook has been put in complete charge of stories at Radio Pictures. That Keith Thompson, after seven years at Paramount, has joined his staff. That Maj. Albert Warner looks better than he has in years. He is here with his attractive wife and both of them are the guests of Jack Warner and his wife.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED at the number of letters that come to this desk sympathizing with Clara Bow. I don't believe the Daisy De Voe trial has hurt her in the least. It has given her friends more to cheer her about and a sympathetic understanding. Paramount is ready to start her in "Kick In," Willard Mack's old play with plenty of melodrama, has put Wynne Gibson in the second feminine lead.

MAURICE CHEVALIER sending word to friends that he is returning to Paris for a holiday when he finishes his next pictures. MARY PICKFORD getting two cables a day from DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

PREMIERE OF SHAW FILM

George Bernard Shaw's "How He Lied to Her Husband" had its Boston premiere at the Repertory yesterday, and will continue for one week as the theater's major film. In the cast are Vera Lennox, Robert Harris and Edmund Gwenn. Miss Lennox was personally chosen by Shaw after he had witnessed her excellent performance in the operetta "Frederica," and noticed that her voice registered with remarkable clarity.

On the same program is the first Boston showing of "Stampede," an epic of the jungle and life in the Sudan.

Loew's Orpheum

Coming Events

"The Man in Possession" will be the new Professional Players attraction at the Plymouth, opening next Monday.

"Elizabeth, the Queen," a Theater Guild production, will be presented at the Colonial on Monday, March 9.

Loew's State

GRIFFITH FILM CLASSIC BACK WITH SOUND

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH'S "Way Down East" opened yesterday at the Majestic for a run at the same theater which housed this noted screen play for its premiere showings years ago. The picture now has sound effects.

That the movie still has powerful appeal was proven by its reception yesterday; many who had seen it before found it interesting and entertaining, as was evident by the chuckles at the comedy, and the exhibition of "sankies" and "snuffles" in the sad sequences. From another point of view the film is full of opportunity for a comparison of the Griffith of that day, and of the later era of the making of "Abraham Lincoln"; for contrast of motion picture technique in every way, and especially for a view of familiar faces, some of whom have faded entirely into talking pictures.

Among the big names in the cast are Lillian Gish, Richard Barthelmess and Lowell Sherman; we find Mary Hay, who was once Mrs. Barthelmess; Creighton Hale, Burr McIntosh, Vivian Ogden, Emily Fitzroy, who is still doing roles similar to the straight-laced landlady of "Way Down East" and numerous other old-timers.

A joy it is also to compare the Sherman of this movie with the older Sherman of today; the same with Barthelmess and some of the rest.

There is a decided "kick" to "Way Down East"; it is won't seeing. Its ice jam passage can still hold one taut; it can still wring the tears, or evoke the laughs, as the audiences proved yesterday.

COPLEY HIT IS 'CARDBOARD LOVER'

The Cast

Monsieur Bonnevrard.....Mark Kent
Charly.....Harry A. Raymond
Paul Guinard.....Douglas McLean
Andre Sallicel.....Robert Henderson
Tony Lagorce.....Jack Storey
A Crumpler.....Joel Lawson
Simone.....Rachel Hartzell
Ubine.....Anne Seymour

By HARRIS MORGAN

THE LAST STARRING vehicle of the late Jeanne Eagels, "Her Cardboard Lover," is dusting laughs this week at the Copley Theater with the clever Rachel Hartzell as the decidedly undecided divorcee who has a hard time making up her mind to go back to a former husband—only then to reject him permanently.

Small though the cast in this adaptation of the French piece by Jacques Duval is, the cast diminishes the fun not at all—and the Copley Players are at their best in the quick-fire farce.

The quandary of Miss Hartzell, as Simone, the divorcee, whim she is unable to rid herself of her cardboard lover and his contrast, is depicted in highly entertaining fashion—and especially, of course, in the evening boudoir scene with the inevitable Pajamas.

Andre Sallicel is the cardboard lover, and a very excellent—even if annoying, mostly, to the divorcee—show he puts on in the piece.

The husband, Tony Lagorce, whom Simone discovered, after the divorce, that she still cared for madly, despite his philanderings, is played by Jack Storey, and the rpaid, Albine, is played by Anne Seymour.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

BLACK GOLD'S GHOST

Romance of Race Track

I'M NOT GOING to try to explain it. I'm not a psychologist, no mystic, no Conan Doyle or Oliver Lodge. I'm just plain Parke Mont, horse trainer. I believe in hunches of course, like all horsemen do, but I don't pretend to explain why hunches sometimes come true.

I don't know why such things happen. I can't explain this story. I'm going to tell you now, I can just tell you the facts. Maybe you can find some high-faluting scientific reason for it all.

This winter I began training horses for Jeff Morell, just like I have for the five years past. He's let me take care of three others for Miss Betty Carroll. Mike Carroll's daughter, you know, the Mike Carroll who had the Rainbow stable, and who got his when he tried to beat a train to the crossing down in Maryland last fall.

Miss Betty doesn't do much talking about her affairs but around the track the race horse people don't have many secrets. We all knew that when Mike Carroll died he left his stock, a feed bill, Miss Betty, and a swell reputation as a squiny shooter, even though improvident as they make 'em.

We hit Fair Grounds for New Orleans winter racing just before Thanksgiving. I worked right hard getting Miss Betty's two best yearlings in shape. Yearlings, you know, all have a birthday on January 1 and get to be two-year-olds. Then after January 1 the babies start to race over three-furlong sprints. We figured, Jef Morell and I, that maybe we could do some good for Miss Betty with those babies.

One of them was a rangy black, by Toney, and something of other made me think of Black Gold when I looked him over. Black Gold was a Black Toney colt, too, you know, and I couldn't help figuring that maybe Miss Betty's baby horse would develop at Fair Grounds just like old Black Gold did back in 1923. His mammy wasn't Useit, like Black Gold's was, but race horses most often take after their daddies when it comes to having racing heart and racing ability and soundness.

The thought kept growing and growing on me, and I even got Miss Betty to name the colt Toney Gold when the time came to send his name in for registration. I began working him with Smokey Simpson up, the same boy who used to ride for Oots when Black Gold was training there at Fair Grounds for his first race in the winter of 1922.

I noticed when I came down to the stables in the evening that Miss Betty and Jeff Morell had sort of formed the habit of being together. And in Jeff Morell's eyes I thought I saw the sort of looks that can't last through the Springtime, when the world begins to wake up and dream.

All you old-time horse players know the story of Black Gold—how Oots owned a little Oklahoma mare and came to love her almost as much as he loved anything on earth. How he finally bred that little mare to Black Toney, and how Black Gold came to be born. You all know how Black Gold won his first start there at Fair Grounds, and won all by himself by five lengths, going on from that to win fourteen races, including the Golden Jubilee running of the Kentucky Derby. What some of you may not know is that Black Gold is buried in the Fair Grounds infield, just by the sixteenth pole, right near where he broke a leg, and died, in 1928, under his kinky hair. We got to the time when we were starting Toney Gold in his first race. I watched it through the glasses, saw Smokey get him away from the three-furlong gate, saw the colt run well up to that pole by the grave of Black Gold.

I saw him there, a full length back of the leader, suddenly burst into a flight of speed such as I haven't seen in years. I saw Smoky Simpson look over his shoulder once, and then began to ride like he was running from the devil.

I was there to see Smoky and the colt when they came back to the winner's circle. And Smoky Simpson was an ashy gray when I gave him a leg down. His teeth chattered and he couldn't talk, hardly. He weighed in and I took the horse to the barns. Later the jockey came over.

"Mist' Monigom'ry," he said, "I seen a h'ant,"—and his teeth rattled like castanets. He kept looking fearfully over his shoulder. I started to laugh.

"Mist' Montgom'ry, don't laugh at me, suh. I tell you I seen a h'ant, Yessuh. Me and Toney Gold go there to the sixteenth, and then, suh, when the colt was actin' like he always does, right there, sorta slowin' down, I seen old Black Gold comin'. He was comin' from behind. His eyes was shootin' fire and he had his mouth wide open. That Toney Gold ain't, Mist' Monigom'ry, he seen that h'ant, too. He just ran like he was scared that h'ant would get him."

Remember that Black Gold was the horse that old man Oots loved, because he'd been the son of that little mare, Useit. Remember that Black Gold loved Oots just as Oots had loved Useit. I been thinking it all over since that first race of Toney Gold. I think Black Gold is bound to make Toney Gold a winner.

Why?

Well, Toney Gold's won six straight races, since that first one, and every race brings Mister Morell and Miss Betty to his stall. It looks, mister, like they won't even wait for spring.

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

"The Heart Knoweth Its Own Bitterness" -:-

HER LITTLE GREY EYES ARE HER CROSS !!
1931
THE FIRST GREY HAIR !!!
TOO THIN ! AND TOO FAT !
THE AGING MATINEE IDOL
CONTEMPLATED YOUTH !
HER NOSE !
THIS YOUNG WOMAN HAS EVERYTHING. SURELY SHE IS CONTENT! BUT NO—EVEN SHE HAS A SECRET SORROW!
OH THE BITTERNESS OF DEPARTED HAIRS!

EACH HEART knoweth its own bitterness—and nobody else does! Each heart is buried forever out of the sight of each other person, and its own secret resentment over a particular cross along with it. Two people pass like ships in the channel, and to each the other has everything just right from top-sail to keel. And each harbors a secret bitterness over a defect that none of the rest of the port is conscious of.

You would think the young person in the middle of my picture was content—would you not? She 'pears to have everything—big bright eyes—not too chubby, straight nose, naturally curly hair, dimples—OOOOH. But there's something wrong—something that gnaws her heart. Maybe her hair is red, and she adores brunettes!

The aging stage star smooths his thinning chestnut waves, and sighs at the sight of a smooth-faced youth. The girl with small grey eyes and lots of talent, burns for huge brown eyes, and would much rather be dumb and beautiful than plain and clever. Her small eyes are her everlasting bitterness! The first grey hair is to some women gall and wormwood, in spite of all their reasoning powers brought to bear on the ache. Maudie wishes for a little of Mamie's fat, and Mamie wishes that she COULD give some of it away and come closer to the ideal of Maudie's meagre legs!

John's waning hair causes him secret anguish and real pain. Though the woman who loves him, loves him just as MUCH as if he had all those departed hairs!

There is this balm for the Bitterness of the Heart. What you have and are, is just exactly what some other person would give anything to have and be!

Luscious Dishes Made From Marshmallow

By MARTHA LEE
Organizer and Conductor of New England's Largest Housemakers' Club of Over 37,000

LOOKING OVER the latest recipe book published by the makers of a famous marshmallow, it's easy to see why more and more women are becoming a bit marshmallow-minded.

Martha Lee.

Such luscious dishes, many of them originated by famous chefs—such as sweet-potatoes stuffed with marshmallows, bits of preserved pineapple skewered with marshmallow arranged on sponge cake and covered with strawberry sauce, marshmallow pancakes, rice pudding, snowballs and a marvelous collection of luscious frostings and fillings.

Even the plainest one-egg cake is glorified with a fluffy chocolate marshmallow frosting, or it may be split in two and filled with a marshmallow pineapple filling and topped with an orange marshmallow icing.

MARSHMALLOW FROSTING

¾ c. sugar.
6 or 8 marshmallows.
1 egg white.
3 tbsps. cold water.

Place sugar, egg white and water in top of double boiler, over boiling water. Beat with Dover beater for 7 minutes. Remove from heat and add quartered marshmallows. Beat for a minute, spread on cake.

This has a delicious "humpy" appearance and splendid flavor.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Our Round Table Recipes

SIX AWARDS of $1 each will be published each Saturday for the best contribution chosen from those printed in this column during the week. The household suggestions may include not only recipes, but any sort of helpful hints for housewives—economical cookery or housekeeping in any of its forms.

Address all contributions to Martha Lee, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

CHEESE POTATO PUFF

2 cups mashed potatoes
2 eggs
½ cup grated cheese
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
½ cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder

FRUIT DAINTIES

Roll some pie crust out very thin, spread with strawberry jam. Cover this with finely sliced apples, sprinkle with crushed walnuts and shredded cocoanut. Roll this up like a jelly roll, bake in moderate oven till a delicate brown. When slightly cool, cut in 2-inch pieces. This is delightful for bridge parties.—Mrs. H. Williams, 14 Brewster ter., Swampscott.

Answers to Requests

FOR MRS. P. N. R., of Newton:

ENGLISH MUFFINS

½ cup water.
1 yeast cake.
1 tsp. salt
2 cups bread flour.

Put milk and water in mixing bowl and, when lukewarm, add yeast cake broken in pieces and when yeast cake has dissolved, add salt and flour. Stir thoroughly and let rise. Cut down and let rise until mixture has increased half its bulk. Sift flour lightly into dripping pans, make impressions with a measuring cup. Drop dough in impressions, dust with flour, and let rise until very light. Lift carefully and cook 15 minutes on a hot buttered griddle, turning several times during the cooking. If greased muffin rings are available, they may be used instead of shaping the muffins by hand.—Mrs. B. R., Ocean st., Marshfield.

FOR MRS. P. N. R. and Mrs. J. F. R.—Your request for English Muffins and Crumpets seem to be one. First, I believe all muffins are English. Crumpets are muffins and muffins are English, so a crumpet is an English Muffin.—Mrs. L. P.

TIGER HEART -:- -:- -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

CONNIE'S eyes grew misty with concern for her mother. "I think, dear, you mustn't let all this get on your nerves and upset you. You've been under a heavy strain already and all the pearls on earth aren't worth it if they throw you into a breakdown!"

"That's right, Mrs. Calvert," Kitty put in. "It isn't as though a few thousand dollars meant anything much to you one way or the other. You can well afford the loss, and I wouldn't worry."

"That's a sensible way of looking at it," Jim Tracy added. "If those lousy pearls hold me up got into the house there'd be no tracing them. If you have some insurance on the pearls, you can collect, all right, so you'll get back, at least, part of their value. Maybe it would be best to notify the insurance company and let it go at that."

"And we'll all be investigated to death," Kitty said, unhappily.

Mrs. Calvert shook her head and turned to Connie.

"What shall I do, dear? It's too much for me, and I shall have to rely on on your decision. The whole thing is so distressing that I can hardly bear to think about it. Whatever you desire to do, Connie, dear, will be all right with me. I do dread any newspaper notoriety about our family, though. Poor Kitty, here—"

"Yes, I am the blot on the family escutcheon," Kitty said, with a queer grimness. "It wouldn't look nice in the papers that the respectable Mr. Calvert ditched his first wife and baby down on Tenth ave."

Suddenly Mrs. Calvert lost color and began to tremble.

"Oh, I'm so sorry, so sorry," Kitty cried. "I didn't mean to hurt you, Mrs. Calvert. I was just talking of myself."

Mrs. Calvert got up from her chair and moved toward the door.

"I'm going to my room," she said, in a tremulous voice.

Connie followed her; before she reached the door Duke Garson stepped to her side and said, in a low voice:

"Come back soon as you can. We'll all wait here for you."

Connie nodded.

"If you'll excuse me," Jim Tracy said, "I'll get in my car and run over home for a while. I want a change of clothes. I'll be back presently."

"I don't think you had better go just yet, Mr. Tracy. We'll all stay right here until Connie returns."

The sulky expression of Jim Tracy's face deepened into anger at Duke Garson's command that he not leave the house. Kitty looked from one man to the other in surprise; affection was in her glance for Tracy, bewilderment lit her eyes as she stared at Garson.

"Do you mean you object to my going?" Tracy asked sharply.

"Under the circumstances, I do," Garson told him, levelly. "We are in the midst of a difficult situation, and I should think you would want to stay, on the chance you might be able to help us out."

This seemed to mollify Tracy, but there was still irritation in his voice.

"Oh, well, if you put it that way, I'll be glad to wait. Only, I'm going to have a little drink. How about you, Kitty?"

"What do you want to start drinking at first thing in the morning for?" Kitty asked him, puzzled. "I'm not going to drink with you, and neither is Duke."

"Aw, be a good fellow!" Tracy threw a careless arm around Kitty and gave her a squeeze. "No? Well, I'm going to have another shot, anyway. Just a little, mild celebration all by myself."

"But why?" Kitty demanded.

"Because you are so sweet," he laughed. "You won't join me, Garson?"

"No, thanks."

Tracy, with a slight swagger, with a freedom based upon long familiarity, had no hesitancy in helping himself to the liquors kept in store for the guests as a part of the lavish hospitality of the house.

"You don't like Jim, do you?" Kitty asked Garson.

"He's all right, I suppose. You're crazy about him, aren't you?"

"I'll say I am!" Kitty returned, enthusiastically. "You know me, Duke. I never can alter the mess, but this boy makes it wreck out of my existence. Honest, I don't know what's the matter with me. When you tell me somebody stole Mrs. Calvert's pearls, it just goes in one ear and out the other. The only important thing I can think of is Jim."

"Well, watch your step," Garson advised her. "Remember, you've got your whole lifetime ahead of you to get set. No use being in a hurry about anything."

The return of Connie interrupted them; yet it was just as well for Garson to realize the futility of giving advice one way or the other to a girl in the throes of infatuation. Connie came into the room slightly downcast.

"As far as I'm concerned I'd just as soon not own a pearl or a diamond, or any jewel, as long as I live," she said, pessimistically. "They cost a lot of money and are always getting lost or stolen. That's one advantage the downright poor have; they don't have to worry over money or property or possessions. I'm convinced the only free people on earth are the poor!"

Jim Tracy joined them; stood with his feet spread apart and his hands in the pockets of his coat.

"Well, what's the verdict? Where do we go from here? Has Mr. Garson evolved any solution of the mystery in the last few minutes?"

"I don't suppose he has, Jim," Connie said, looking straight at Tracy. "If it didn't seem such a scandalous waste of money I'd say we ought to let the whole business go hang."

Garson shook his head. "You can't do that. Unpleasant facts can't be dodged. Besides, there are three of us here—Kitty, Mr. Tracy and myself — who are obliged to do everything possible to find the thief and try to get the pearls back. It's not pleasant to say, but I'm sure that each of us would come under suspicion if the police were called in."

"Nonsense!" Connie exclaimed.

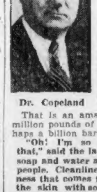
For Good Complexion, Scrub the Face

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

NOT LONG ago I talked with the owner of a "beauty parlor." She is an unusually intelligent person and I was much impressed by her common views regarding the skin.

I want my readers to have the benefit of what this good woman told me. If all or some of these suggestions are followed, they cannot be otherwise than helpful to the sufferer from a bad skin.



Dr. Copeland

I had spoken of the remarkable output of one American soapmaker. This firm produced and sold last year 96,000 tons of soap.

That is an amazing thing—192 million pounds of toilet soap, perhaps a billion bars!

"Oh! I'm so glad to hear that," said the lady. "Too little soap and water are used by the people. Cleanliness, the cleanliness that comes from scrubbing the skin with soap, water and a rough wash rag, are essential to a good complexion."

Then we talked about the skin eruptions, particularly the acne and blackheads so many boys and girls have.

"If only these children would scrub their faces and then leave on the surface to dry in a lot of the lather of common, yellow laundry soap," she said, "they are on the way to a speedy recovery of normal skin.

"After the soap has dried sellow vaseline should be applied, right on top of the dried soap. This is left on all night and scrubbed off by vigorous washing in the morning."

That, the lady said, will soon end the acne.

Then we talked about "alopecia," that peculiar form of localized baldness from which some persons suffer. There is just a patch of scalp disease that causes a loss of hair from a spot the size of a silver dollar, or larger. The doctors call it "alopecia areata."

"If this area is soaked night and morning with a two per cent formaldehyde solution, dried, painted with iodine and then smeared with yellow vaseline twice a day, the trouble will disappear in two weeks."

Thus said the lady.

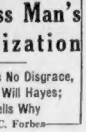
Yes, Ours Is a Business Man's Civilization

But That Is No Disgrace, Declares Will Hayes; He Tells Why

—By B. C. Forbes—



B. C. Forbes

New York, Feb. 17 — Whether civilization in America advances or recedes will depend chiefly on our business men.

They have become the most potent, the most powerful, the most determining class. Their influence on the lives, on the wellbeing of the people is now greater than that of our statesmen and politicians, our preachers, our poets, our scholars or any other members of the intelligentsia.

For weal or woe, Business is King.

Will H. Hays, guide, philosopher and friend of that amazing modern industry which now enters so vitally into the daily life of this and other nations, brought up this subject while chatting the other day. It was evident that he had given the matter much thought. When I suggested that he could say something which would interest readers of this column, he dug up the following, which he revolved some time ago.

"This has been called a business man's civilization. The man who first used that phrase did not mean to confer a compliment. He had some vague notion that, because America has taken advantage of its natural resources and translated them into comforts, there is something fundamentally wrong with our lives. He had some vague idea that because America has become a dominant factor in the world's trade, we have turned our backs on those things which we all agree give men lasting satisfaction. He wanted us to believe that because a man has money in the bank, sends his children to good schools, gives them food to eat, and works an hour overtime to get a new account, he is a supplicant before Mammon.

"Never was there a falser philosophy, never was there a sneer more akin to a compliment.

"The founders of this republic were all business men. Because they were business men, and not doctrinaires unaccustomed to subjecting their theories to the test of reality, they established that form of government best adapted of all ever established to meet the practical needs of men in the practical world of affairs.

"George Washington was the richest man in the colonies—planter, real estate dealer, engineer—and his first thought after his retirement from the presidency was the economic development of the West. The first bill signed by him as President was one which stated in its preamble that its aim was the development of manufactures and the expansion of commerce.

"Our whole American civilization stands as a monument to business enterprise, and the development of this continent during the last century—a miracle of progress without example in history—has been a triumph of company initiative. Let the cynic decry business enterprise. Let him assail commercial development. He can afford to do so, because it does not necessitate his giving up the benefits to humanity which flow from it.

"It is the business man in the congregation who supports the church; and there are a multitude of a million churches open in this country. Millions of dollars annually go to universities and to the actual support of young people in our schools. Thirty years ago less than 6 per cent of the children between 14 and 17 years of age were in high schools. Today, when we are richer, more than 48 per cent of those children are enrolled in schools.

"It was the business man, working hand in hand with the scientist, who took the phonograph into the average home and gave happiness to thousands. It was the business man and the scientist who brought the motion picture within the reach of all.

"Business men built most of the libraries that dot this country. They built homes for opera and they support opera. They paid for our art galleries and they contributed our art pieces. They finance the study of disease.

"No apology is needed for a business man's civilization. In fact, any attack on business, any unfair treatment of business, is an attack on the maintenance of our schools, our hospitals and our churches."

* * *

Will lawmakers and others please ponder these truths?

BANK STATEMENT

Boston balance	$53,000,000
Boston clearance	75,000,000

N.E. TELEPHONE LIFTS CAPITAL $50,000,000

The authorized capital stock of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. was increased from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 at the annual stockholders' meeting in New York today, but officials stated no immediate financing is contemplated.

The usual quarterly dividend of $2 a share, payable March 31, to stockholders of record March 10, was declared. All officers were re-elected.

At the regular monthly appropriation meeting of the company in Boston the executive committee authorized expenditure of $1,837,890 for new construction and improvements in plant necessary to meet demands for service.

Appropriations for Massachusetts were $1,425,535; for Maine, $50,970, and for Rhode Island, $259,387.

Appropriation for Greater Boston include $170,974 for Boston toll office equipment; $63,702 for the Parkway exchange, $19,490 for lines in Medford, $30,930 for Weymouth, and $19,575 for Everett.

Allotments for other parts of Massachusetts include $312,020 for dial equipment in the new Framingham office, $26,039 for Brockton, $41,891 for Worcester, and $5,846 for Auburn.

BOSTON STOCK PRICES MIXED

American Telephone, Atchison, General Electric, Old Colony, Stone & Webster, Hygrade Lamp and Westinghouse all ran off a point or more.

At the same time point or better advances were registered by Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred, New England Telephone, Boston Tow Boat Drill, Eastern Steamship second preferred and American & British preferred.

Inactive locally, Waldorf System common was one of the features on the "big board," advancing to a new high on the move. Company is planning for 1930, with earnings around $2.55 a share, against $2.50 in 1929. Net per share covered the annual dividend of $1.50 by a wide margin. Company is planning further expansion in metropolitan New York.

Another active market on the New York Stock Exchange was reflected in the heavy turnover in issues handled by the specialists.

$2,975,000 Award

Syndicate headed by First National Bank of New York was awarded $2,975,000 San Francisco 4½ per cent bonds, due 1932 to 1953, on bid of 102.858.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Missouri, Kansas, Texas railroad resisted further selling today and showed a fractional gain most of the session. "Katy's" monthly directors' meeting, scheduled for today, will not be held because of lack of quorum. Next regular meeting will be March 10. Significance attached to the meeting is as to what action will be taken regarding the common dividend. At the end of the last three-quarters of 1930, a dividend of 1' was paid.

Southwesterns to Show Reductions

Although Missouri-Kansas-Texas earned but a shade above common dividends last year it was considered disbursements were justified in view of the excellent cash position of the company. Indications are that southwestern roads will show a decline of 10 per cent to 15 per cent the first six months of this year from 1930. Preliminary estimates place January gross of Missouri-Kansas-Texas at around 15 per cent below a year ago, and it was impossible to measure the decline through a similar reduction of expenses.

Short Covering in Westinghouse Electric

Westinghouse Electric has been aided recently by considerable short covering. There is also evidence of moderate amount of new buying in the stock because commission houses have been urging customers to place their funds in stocks with the best prospects for the current year. Unfilled orders of Westinghouse now are smaller than many anticipated, so that the outlook for earnings early this year is not as good as could be desired.

Walworth Business Gained in Month

The moderate amount of buying seems into Walworth recently because of reports that the business of the company in January had reached an upturn. Part of the demand has been attributed to outsiders who have been picking up the low-priced issues which suffered severely during the past year on the theory that such stocks will show good rallies during general strength.

Walworth had good market sponsorship about a year ago, but the stock has been quiet for some time. Earnings in the first nine months of 1930 were equal to $2.35 a common share. The stock pays $2 at present, but it is probable the dividend will be reduced in the near future.

Continental Baking "A" Selling at Low Ratio

Low ratio to earnings at which Continental Baking A is selling is attracting increased interest in the stock. Earnings of the company during 1930 were equal to nearly $3 a share, which is the basis of current prices it is selling for about than four times earnings during 1930.

In addition, it is understood that earnings thus far in 1931 are running slightly ahead of the corresponding period last year. At the same time, interests in close touch with the affairs of the company express the belief that the showing during the current year will exceed that of 1930.

Trico Products' Foreign Business

Interest has been aroused in the probability of increased foreign business for Trico Products in the future. This is due to the fact that the company has officially announced royalty contracts with the largest accessory manufacturer in England. Trico has extended its operations in that country to take care of a larger foreign business. Naturally, this step is likely to be reflected in increased earnings from this source during the current year.

PROFIT-TAKING IN WALL ST. IS HEAVY

New York, Feb. 17—Heavy profit taking, combined with short selling, caused substantial recessions in New York Stock Exchange trading today after a forenoon of strength in pivotal shares.

The market rallied from its lowest prices, but closed with a heavy one

SESSION IS ERRATIC

It was an active and exceeding-ly erratic session. Early gains of 2 to 7 points were turned into net losses of about the same extent in a number of instances.

American Telephone, General Electric and General Motors lost about 1 to 1½ net, while the declines in U. S. Steel, Loew's, North American, Macy, Case and Westinghouse ranged from 2 to 3.

A few stocks remained strong. American Water Works, Worthington Pump, Vanadium, Briggs, Borg Warner and National Power & Light rallying 2 to 3½ from approximate 4,200,000 shares

Auburn Auto, after rallying $6 to the new 1931 high of $205, dropped to $185.50, but then rebounded sharply.

The market fluctuated widely during the morning, and several issues were pushed up 4 to 5 points, but the so-called pivotal shares were heavily sold at times. Offerings above yesterday's final levels, and by afternoon slid off to show losses of a point or two.

BONDS CREEP DOWN

In the meantime, the bond market crept lower under moderate selling pressure, as bankers interpreted the progress of the soldier bonus compromise measure as foreshadowing a large volume of government financing.

The churning about of the list resulted in a heavy turnover, but it took higher prices to bring out any large volume of selling. Offering lightened when prices dipped under yesterday's final prices.

The selling appeared to be a combination of profit-taking, bear selling, and liquidation which had been deferred for better prices.

In conservative quarters, the highly professional character of the recent advance has been regarded with some disfavor. Bullish activity has been most conspicuous in issues most easily moved, in spite of cases seemingly irrespective of earnings prospects of the corporations represented.

Furthermore, there has been a feeling that the quiet backsliding of late last week had been insufficient to entrench the market at a higher level and that the bull campaign was getting out of hand.

Nevertheless, brokerage house opinion remained mildly optimistic, in the main anticipating some extension of the rally after a technical reaction.

Sentiment among business executives improved yesterday with the growing conviction that the depression has at least touched rock bottom. A business survey just finished for the private information of the directors of a large investment company indicates this improved sentiment as one of the most marked developments.

GAIN FOR HOME PRODUCTS

New York, Feb. 17—American Home Products Corporation reports for 1930 a net income of $3,381,005, after all charges and taxes, which compares with a net income of $3,360,602 in 1928. Net for the year is equal to $3.50 a share, earned on 611,000 shares of stock outstanding, and compares with $3.47 a share in the preceding year.

Sales for the year amounted to $14,918,315, which compares with net sales of $13,644,806 in the preceding year.

Curb Market Has Irregular Course

New York, Feb. 17—A succession of rallies and declines kept the Curb market's course irregular today. Operations for the advance in the early sessions featured a sprinkling of new highs, but the gains ended as a covering rush of extensive profit-taking and flat lots buoyancy

Exports of Grain in Week Lowered

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—Exports of grains from the United States in the week ended Feb. 14 totalled 235,000 bushels as compared with 479,000 bushels in the preceding week and 1,971,000 in the corresponding week of 1930.

Grains Are Steady in Chicago Market

Chicago, Feb. 17—Grains closed steady to firm today. Wheat was unchanged to 4c up, corn to unchanged to 4c up, oats to unchanged to ⅛c up, rye finished ¼ to ⅝c higher.

Business Better, Jaffray Announces

New York, Feb. 17 (AP)—C. I. Jaffray, president of Soo Line and Lake, said today that business as a whole is better than a few months ago and the outlook is improving.

TREES BELONG TO CALIFORNIANS IN WOODS, SAYS BOSSY GILLIS

Newburyport, Feb. 17—Fuming at the continual depredations Mayor Andrew J. Peters, Gillis, Republican Councillor Richard A. Noyes of yesterday's tree hearing held in City Hall.

Addressing the hundreds of spectators "Bossy" asserted, "I think the proper place for all trees is in the woods."

The meeting which was called by the mayor after a bitter attack by the councillor upon him for his "ruthless" cutting down of the city's finest trees, brought out the fact that Gillis wished to impress upon the people present that it is intended to do as he pleased in regard to the cutting of the trees.

Councillor Noyes supported by Dr. Frank W. Snow, president of the Newburyport Improvement Society and Henry Learned, shoe manufacturer, raised considerable objection to the removal of an elm tree opposite the home of John Healey, 58 Washington st. Despite the fact that Healey asked the tree be removed because he feared for the safety of his wife and daughter, because of the condition of the elm in question, all three men argued that the tree was too beautiful to destroy.

Gillis in reply to the opposition and the raised roots of this particular tree caused an uplifting of the sidewalk and it is dangerous to the public.

"Why," said Gillis, "your beautiful tree should resulted in a woman breaking her nose when she took a spill recently over the raised roots."

The mayor admitted that the meeting amounted to nothing, as he intended to remove the tree anyway.

Not satisfied with the result of the hearing, Councillor Noyes will carry his fight to the City Council. He intends to introduce at the next meeting an ordinance restricting the mayor's power.

Haverhill Shoe Payrolls Increase

Haverhill, Feb. 17—The total payrolls in Haverhill shoe factories last week was $291,868, an increase of $2,310 over that of the previous week. Manufacturers claim that these figures are considerably below the normal payroll for this season.

Manufacturers continue to insist they are unable to compete with those of other localities while prices being sold under the cost of production by manufacturers association and the Shoe Workers Protective Union and declare they cannot obtain the business on such orders. For some time the manufacturers have sought a revision of the contract to allow a wage reduction, but the union thus far has refused their request.

2 CALIFORNIANS SEND TUNNEL NAMES

From far-off California came two suggestions today for a name for the new traffic tunnel to East Boston—one of them from a prisoner in San Quentin Prison.

Sifting within the gray walls of California's state penitentiary, Edmund Robinson, who says he is a Boston boy, figured out that the new tunnel should be named Ruby Valley Tunnel—and sent that as his vote.

And from Barstow in San Bernardino County, Jeremiah McCarthy, who declares he receives the Boston Evening American daily, sent the suggestion Massachusetts Tunnel.

The name Curley Tunnel is still far in the lead, however, and is now nearing the 500 mark. Here are the first 20 leaders:

$50 Weekly for News and Picture Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

What is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That is a news tip.

If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event, while it is happening. Bring your action pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or the most unusual event news tip received; $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips.

AD CLUB HOLDS DINNER-DANCE

More than 100 of Boston's leading advertising executives and guests attended and Old Timer's dinner-dance held last night in "Ye Chanticleer" Country Club dining room under the auspices of the Advertising Club of Boston.

A feature of the evening was the film presentation of a collection of advertisements covering the period from 1880 to 1905. The presentation was arranged by A. H. Wilson, chairman of the entertainment committee.

Among those attending the dinner-dance were: Louis D. Gibbs, club president and public relations executive of the Edison Co.; Maj P. F. O'Keefe, Frank Black, director of the club and publicity director Filene's; Chester I. Campbell, Henry B. Humphrey, Thomas Driscoll, George D. Mc. Lon, treasurer; Ernest L. Johnson, vice-president.

Others were William H. Foble-ton, advertising manager of Pneumatic Sales Corp.; Ralph Condur, advertising and publicity manager Woven Hose and Rubber Co.; Fred L. Ware, of the New England Confectionery and Herbert Stephens, secretary of the club, and New England manager of the American Lithograph Co.

Inn Proprietor on Trial for Arson

Brockton, Feb. 17—Donald H. Duffie of Wareham, erstwhile proprietor of the Iron Kettle, a Warehouse Point, Conn., inn, went before a jury in superior court here on an indictment charging him with the crime of burning the inn to defraud four insurance companies.

The police claim that Duffie fled to Iron Kettle on Feb. 4, 1930 but the fire was soon put out and Duffie was arrested for burning July 20, two days later and for that, Duffie is being made to answer now.

SKILL COUNTS IN MODEL COACH WORK NOW

This week's lesson for members of the Boston American Chapter of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild takes up the first steps having to do with decoration of the miniature coach. The principal thing to remember at this point is to do everything slowly and carefully as a precaution against mistake. Much of the work consists of carving, and a single slip of the knife may undo all that it has taken hours to accomplish.

Before starting the actual parts it is recommended that Guild members gain some familiarity with this new process, on scrap material. Then when the strangeness wears off, go ahead on the part you really intend to use.

Errors caused by slips of the knife, if not too great, can be mended with plastic wood, plaster of paris, or other material which the paint will later cover up entirely.

Here is today's lesson:

LESSON NO. 13

Corner Spirals

To start a bit of to make the ornamental parts of the corner spirals, cut out one long piece and cut off to required lengths. Remember that the grain of the wood should be used for these parts, such as white pine, mahogany or cedar.

Use square up a piece of stock to the size 3-16-3-16-12 inch.

Now to transfer the pattern. Trace one side of the pattern from the illustration and then reverse the tracing paper and trace the other side. Be sure to get the centering done with a pair of dividers.

Use a round file edges with a file and sandpaper

Cut off the stock to length

Use fine veneer punch to body for rivets, using necessary rivets from the top view of Guild drawings. To do this, shape a piece of veneer to fit the "V" cut out required. Draw a line across the stock lengthwise to form each of each mark the "V" sands, using the lengthwise line as a starting point. Connect other line of angle lengthwise across stock. See step No. 6 of illustration No. 15. Remove stock with saw knife or chisel.

Glue the pieces in place. Shape with Guild drawing to have spiral ends going in proper direction.

CORNER HORNS

Now, using the power saw cut out a cardboard template to the shape of the body corner pieces.

Trace this curve on a piece of 1/16" thick stock. Mount piece in the V-cut out required. Draw a line across the stock lengthwise to form each of each mark the "V" sands, using the lengthwise line as a starting point. Connect other line of angle lengthwise across stock. See step No. 6 of illustration No. 15. Remove stock with saw knife or chisel.

Use fine veneer punch to body for rivets, using necessary rivets from the top view of

she granted myself and other reporters at the time:

"We were at breakfast with Sir Cecil and Lady Spring-Rice. The bell rang and Physic left to answer it. In a few minutes we heard him cry: 'Mr. Morgan, Mr. Morgan, upstairs, quick!' Instantly Mr. Morgan jumped up and started upstairs, and I with him. It was his idea and mine that something was wrong upstairs. Just what we did not know. It was not our idea that there was any danger in the hall that Physic was trying to get Mr. Morgan away from. Our idea was that there might be a fire in the upper part of the house.

"We got upstairs and went through room after room, and everything was all right until we came out into the front hallway. I was ahead and I saw a man coming up the stairs.

"He had a pistol in either hand. Then I knew that he was a lunatic, or worse, intent upon murdering my husband, and I screamed and jumped at him. Mr. Morgan jumped at the same time and brushed me to one side just as the man fired. Mr. Morgan landed upon him and they went to the floor of the landing together. I got one of the revolvers away from him, then Mr. Morgan got the other and was trying to subdue him when the servants and others rushed up. Physic had something in his hand. He hit the man with it and I think he was not so troublesome to handle. For a thin man he was very active and strong.

HOLT TIED UP

"Then the servants tied him with trunk straps and ropes. I asked him why he wanted to kill Mr. Morgan. He said he did not want to kill him, but that he did want him to stop sending supplies to the allies. The first that I knew Mr. Morgan had been hit was when he went to the telephone and called Dr. W. H. Zabriskie's number and said he had been hit. After the doctor came, I asked Physic what had happened. He said that the man had given him a card and that when he saw it was no one Mr. Morgan would want to see at the house anyway, he told him of this and then the man pushed a pistol against him and forced him into the hall.

"Physic very shrewdly tried to get him into the library and picked his own life to get a chance to warn Mr. Morgan. As he came up the stairs at us, he said something. It sounded like, 'I want to see you, Mr. Morgan.'

Mr. Morgan made no answer to that, but jumped for him. All the time the man was on the landing, trying to wrestle his way out, he kept talking, but I couldn't make out what he was saying. I was too excited. Then the police came and took the man away."

Constable Frank McCahill was the first officer to reach the Morgan home. He found the financier's assailant bleeding from wounds inflicted by the servants. After other officers arrived, the prisoner was removed to the village lockup. The suitcase was taken along, also the revolvers. Search of the man's pockets brought to light a stick of dynamite. And additional sticks, all bearing fuses, were found in the suitcase. After being given surgical treatment, the prisoner called for pencil and paper and wrote as follows:

Mrs. F. Holt,
Dallas, Texas.

"Man proposes, God disposes. Don't come until you get my letter. Be strong.

"F. Holt,
"Tex. and Ithaca."

He asked that it be sent as a telegram.

MOVED TO JAIL

Later in the day he was removed to the Nassau county jail at Mineola. Meanwhile, Morgan's wound had been attended to, and said he had been shot in the hip. The bullet was extracted and he recovered within a short time.

Capt. Thomas Tunney, of the New York City police bomb squad, a passenger on the same train that bore me to Glen Cove that day. The prisoner admitted he was responsible for the bomb explosion at the capitol in Washington. He declared that his plan in connection with Morgan was to drive all the members of the family to the upper part of the house and hold them as hostages.

Here is what he told me when I interviewed him at the jail in Mineola:

"I wanted to get hold of Mrs. Morgan and the children, take them to an upstairs room and then send Mr. Morgan out to see his influential friends and stop the exportation of supplies to the allies. I planned to take the dynamite into that upstairs room, cut a hole in the door and have food shoved through it. I planned to keep them there until Mr. Morgan returned and gave me his pledge that he had stopped the shipments. Unless he stopped it, I would tell him through the hole of my intention to kill Mrs. Morgan and the children and myself by exploding the dynamite."

IDENTITY BARED

Investigation revealed that the prisoner was Frank Holt, instructor in German at Cornell University, who was to have become a member of the faculty of Southern Methodist University at Dallas, Tex., in the fall as professor of languages. His appointment having been announced.

When this information reached Chicago, Prof. Chester Nathan Gould of the University of Chicago declared that Holt was in reality Erich Muenter, former instructor at Harvard University, and wanted by the authorities at Cambridge on a charge of having murdered his first wife by administering poison. Gould said that during a visit to Cornell he had recognized Holt as Muenter, but had kept still about it, "because he was doing well."

(How Muenter-Holt cheated the law will be told in tomorrow's chapter.)

Fatter and Fairer on 28-Cent Diet

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—None young women who lived four weeks on a diet costing 28 cents a day apiece, today were pronounced by physicians fitter, fatter and fairer.

The diet included no meat, but 3 cups of eggs were on it, with peanut and soy bean products, cottage cheese, oranges and tomatoes.

Marian Lord Weds Arthur McLaglen

Beverly Hills, Cal., Feb. 17 (AP)—Arthur McLaglen, film actor and brother of Victor McLaglen, featured player, and Marian Lord, stage and screen actress, were married last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Coldway.

Victor McLaglen acted as best man and Mrs. Coldway was matron of honor. Clifford McLaglen, another brother, and his wife, who arrived from the East, attended the wedding.

No More 'Divine Right'

Says the ex-Kaiser's Son

The ex-Kaiser, until his abdication, believed that he ruled by "divine right." Perhaps he still believes it. He never was backward about proclaiming it, and few Germans had the temerity to dispute it. The doctrine that the Emperor and the nobility were superior to the common people was almost an article of faith throughout the empire.

Now, thirteen years after the Kaiser fled ignominiously to Holland, his fourth son, Prince August Wilhelm, of Prussia, says in a public speech:

"Nobility of birth is not decisive any longer. Nobility of character, thought and action is the first factor of the new State."

EX-KAISER WILHELM

Complaining of the presumption of many aristocratic families "who evidently do not notice the deep gulf dividing the German people," the Prince continues:

"Those who cannot find the way to this coming State should not be surprised if some day the new State steps over them to accomplish its task."

Had young August Wilhelm said that before 1918 he would have been banished to a dungeon or a lunatic asylum by his imperial father. In 1931 it is his father who is banished and the son who wins applause from his countrymen by his democratic utterances.

PRINCE AUGUSTE WILHELM

Times change, and ideas change with them.

Many Splendid Traits

A Final Tribute to Gen. Edwards

In our deep affection for General Edwards we have been prone to overlook the fact that his solicitous, fatherly concern for our sons of the Yankee Division in the World War was only one of the varied elements of his greatness

General Edwards was chief of staff to Lawton in the Philippine insurrection when the sturdy natives were fighting desperately.

He helped to organize the important defenses of the Panama Canal. He organized the Insular Bureau at Washington.

We know that General Edwards had a deep love and regard for his fellowman, especially the humble subordinates who were placed under his charge and keeping. But these other events of importance in his active life demonstrated personal courage, military skill and a lively comprehension of the art of both civil and military government.

We pay our final offering of respect and veneration to our beloved soldier and friend whose virtues seem to us to have been summed up in the lines of Charles Dibdin:

"His form was of the manliest beauty,
His heart was kind and soft;
Faithful below he did his duty,
And now he's gone aloft."

Save Our Guard Flyers!

New Hangars, Or No Unit

"Unless proper facilities are provided by July 1 for the Massachusetts National Guard Air Units, federal recognition will be withdrawn. This means the assignment of the air units to another State."

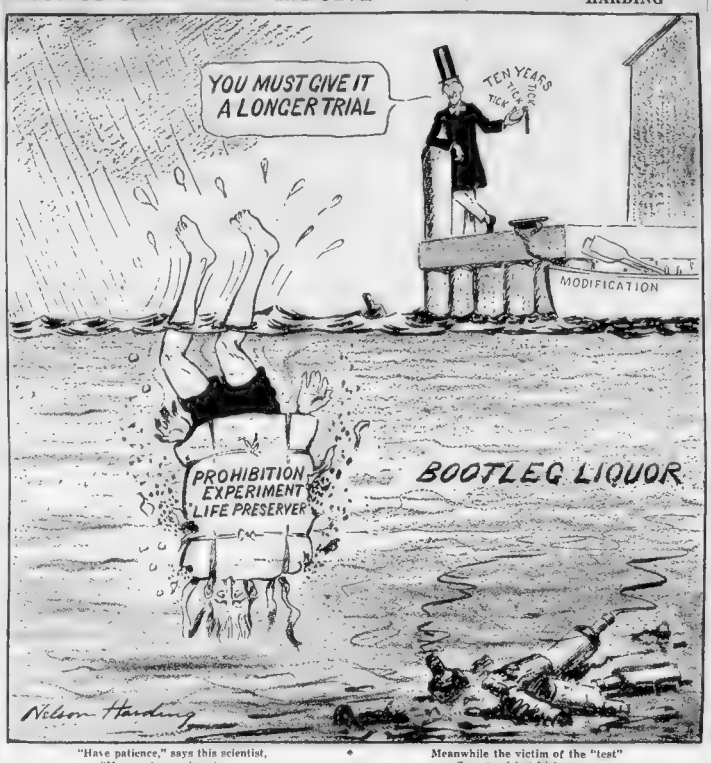
It is a sort of dismal warning. It is one that should be heeded forthwith.

We have in Boston one of the finest airports in the world an airport that will be unsurpassed when the Governors Island development is completed.

Amid the splendid hangars established by private aeronautical firms, the National Guard headquarters, dilapidated, forlorn and a fire menace, are a shabby tribute to this State.

Governor Ely properly asks for $250,000 for new hangars. We ought to have them, for our own self-respect, even if we were not interested in aviation for defense and commercial greatness.

PROLONGING THE AGONY -:- By NELSON HARDING



"Have patience," says this scientist,
"My great experiment
May keep you cruelly submerged
But it is nobly meant!

Meanwhile the victim of the "test"
Can stand but little more,
And drowning seems his fate unless

New York Day by Day -:- A Visit From Sem -:- By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—Sem, celebrated Parisian caricaturist, has been a winter visitor to New York, following the trek of his author friend, Paul Morand. At 65, Sem is one of the figures to Americans visiting the French capital. Yet he speaks no English.

Where Americans group—on the Cambon side of the Ritz, Harry's bar, Zelli's, Chez Florence, Lou ...'s or wherenot—Sem usually drops in. He is known by neither name. But he has another not even his intimates know it. His drawings are a nations' talent, like jazz in America.

In a manner, his caricatures suggest the unlovely etchings of Hogarth—raw and searing with realism. He has constantly shot arrows of contempt, although in later years humor triumphed somewhat over early bitterness. "After all," he philosophized, "one deserves friends most of all."

Many cafe fights with those Sem offended enlivened the boulevards. There was that memorable luncheon at Ciro's when Fanny Ward walked over to Sem's table and dashed wine in his face. That day Sem's year book appeared limning Miss Ward in comic strokes.

His limning of Paris familiars causes him to retreat to the Brittany countryside annually until the furore dies. Sem had never been to New York or America before, and had no preconceived notions. He refused to read about the metropolis, preferring to form his own opinions.

He came to Paris from Marseilles, a funny little man past 40. His chance was accidental. He took a cartoon to Henri Letellier, publisher of Le Journal, and one of the greatest sportsmen in France. He waited a while, left his drawing and, in sudden fright, departed.

Letellier happened to glance at it among other things on his desk, rang for a secretary and sent him flying after Sem. The caricaturist was two blocks away. He had decided not to return but take an afternoon train for Marseilles.

Two of Sem's American friends have appeared at movie desks in Hollywood—Basil Woon and Jed Kiley. For 10 years they were familiars in that pompous purlieu circling the Place Vendome. Indeed, Hollywood has its "Paris colony," which includes Lois Moran, Dorothy Mackaill, Wynn Holcomb, Claire Luce, Tom Barry and Lynn Starling.

Despite the failure of her blackface play, no actress this winter drew such a brilliant first night audience as Ethel Barrymore. The event proved again the power of the Barrymore name. It was, too, probably the only premiere of the season to collect 11 monocle wearers.

What was once known as "the heel" in the Broadway patter is now a "wet smack."

Effective realism in a Rialto farce. A sudden denouement of a sugar daddy in a courtroom scene. His pallid face slowly colors into apoplectic purple. The trick is performed wearing a high collar against which he chokes himself.

Fugitive romance is sought in odd nooks around New York. In a lonely reach of Central Park the other frosty night a woe-begone young man sat on a bench gazing at the sky. Charles Hanson Towne, enunciated a poet himself, passed by. "A beautiful night," he observed.

She was a lithe, exquisite creature with a pantherine walk—you know, the sort in whose hands you feel like wax — and all eyes turned upon her entrance into the spacious room. There was a jumbled vision of proud shoulders, mocking chin and long lashes. Someone broke the silence with: "You look superb, Anita!" In a rasping voice she countered: "All right, all right, but what do you have to do around here to get a drink—sing or dance?" New York!

* * *

Disillusioning telegram: "That girl whom prematurely white hair recently excited you is a walking ad for a hair dresser. It's a transformation." Any day I expect to hear the stock business is phoney.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

DISCOURAGED?

Feel that your life isn't getting anywhere?

If you could only do something interesting—

But all these monotonous, meaningless chores — what do they amount to?

Feel like that? Yes, I know. I've felt like that too. Desperate feeling. Keeps it up long enough and you'll be jibbering, hammering empty air with frantic fists.

Elsie Robinson

Once when I was in the midst of it, I found something that helped. Two verses from an old book—

"In the beginning God created the heaven and earth. And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters."

God—

In the beginning—

God facing darkness that was without form and void. God moving through darkness without light . . . through chaos without form. God laboring, to make a heaven and earth. And even though he was God, laboring without light. Laboring, waiting, struggling.

Was He sometimes troubled himself?

In the end it was finished and "He saw that it was very good." But what of those aeons before the night held stars, or the earth rose, green and sweet, above the waters?

Did He sometimes, while he waited, wonder if it would all be worthwhile? Is the small, discouraged cry, in your heart and mine, the echo of His vast, divine discontent as He labored there in the darkness?

I wonder. I know so little about the ways of gods. But this I do know—

There never yet was a great deed that did not know its prelude of darkness and void. There never yet was a great soul that did not serve time under starless skies, by empty waters, in silence and loneliness—wondering what it was all about. Wondering, yet working on—

And this I also know. As surely as there was night, so surely came the morn. As surely as there was void, so surely was something born of that void. And none of that serving was ever lost. It all had meaning . . . in the end. Each slightest thought, each smallest gesture . . . each disjointed, despairing hope, came to its certain harvest.

Discouraged?

Feel that your life isn't getting anywhere? Ready to quit? Don't, my dear. The days are not meaningless. The night does have an end. Go on!

Go on groping, fumbling, building in the dark. Never mind if you can't understand. Never mind if you can't see a purpose or a pattern to it all. There is a purpose. It is making a pattern. For weal or woe, every gesture, every thought, every hope, is weaving into a pattern. Nothing will be lost. Rejoice in that. Be warned by it, too. Presently, where there was only void there will be earth . . . making now in its beauty or ugliness. Presently, where there was only darkness, there will be stars . . . those stars that you are lighting now, to burn darkly or gloriously.

Go on . . . as even God Himself had to go on—until the dawn.

The Planet Eros

Too Small to Live On, But Useful to Science

LANDSCAPE ON A BABY PLANET, EROS

Our family of planets sailing around the sun includes a tiny brother named Eros. If placed on the earth this little planet would be about twice as high as our highest mountain, since it is approximately sixteen miles in diameter. And if it fell into the ocean, near the shore, it might drown millions of people in a tidal wave.

It won't do that, however, as it can never come nearer to us than 16,000,000 miles, the planet's approximate distance two weeks ago.

Scientists were eagerly waiting for its coming, expecting to use that convenient little distance of 16,000,000 miles as the base of a triangle that will help more accurately to measure the distance of the sun and the weight of the earth and the weight of the moon. Your scientific friend will tell you about measuring distance with the aid of a parallax, calculating the moon's weight by measuring its "pull" and the earth's "wobble" upon a common axis.

Boys will be interested to know that if they lived on the planet Eros, with its very slight "mass," they might be able to jump one hundred feet into the air and come down with no shock. They could hop across a wide river.

This picture, made for the Illustrated London News by the distinguished artist, Scriven Bolton, [illegible] how things would look to you if you stood on the little planet Eros and looked toward the sun.

A planet so small would not have any atmosphere, and consequently the sky would be always jet black; the moon, the sun, shining in it like a light on a black curtain, the stars showing in daytime, as they do on the earth if you look up from the bottom of a very deep well.

You know that if we had no atmosphere on the earth the sky would look black to us. And even with an atmosphere, if there were no DUST in it, there would be no sunshine.

Concerning this curious little planet, one of about a thousand called asteroids, that revolve around the sun, between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter, not disturbing each other, roaming on and on through the millions of years, Astronomer Bolton writes:

"Such small worlds as these—averaging only some twenty miles in diameter—cannot well maintain an atmosphere. In imagination we stand on one of them. We behold a world totally different from ours, being probably a frozen mass of sandstone, destitute of air and water and the essentials to life development. The rough-cast jagged surface has retained its pristine brightness. We find rocks and precipices of untarnished hues, towering pinnacles, with yawning pits of appalling depth. The sun, which appears smaller than from the earth, shines in a black, star-hit sky, even at noon. No sound, however loud, is heard. One might easily spring a hundred feet high, and feel no greater shock, on descent, than by leaning a yard on the earth. The next near approach of Eros to the earth is due in 1938, after which occurs an interval 'til 1975."

If you could explode a million tons of gunpowder on the planet Eros you would not hear a sound, for, "no atmosphere, no sound." Sound is carried by the waves in the air, and it cannot travel in a vacuum.

For that matter, if you exploded a million tons of gunpowder on this earth and there was no EAR near enough to hear it, there would be no sound. Sound is not a thing of itself, it is the effect that concussion produces on the ear of some living animal. When a giant tree falls in the forest and there is no ear there, there is no "sound."

How mysterious it is to think of thousands of planets, uninhabited, lonesome little balls of stone and metal, flying at terrific speeds around the sun, through the long millions of millions of years.

These little fragments of flying matter, perhaps, split up and create the meteors that once in a while strike our earth, occasionally big enough to frighten and destroy.

Little Eros, also our own earth, and the other bigger planets, are supposed to have been pulled loose from the sun by the "gravitational pull" of another great star passing close to our sun, pulling off a piece of it. You may say that is speculation, but scientists are quite sure of it.

In any case, we live in a mysterious universe and should occasionally lift our eyes to the sky and lift our interests above the little back yard in the rear of our dwelling.

You cannot blame the microbe in a cheese for thinking only about the cheese.

But you pity a human being living on this beautiful earth and taking no interest in the universe outside of it. We are here for a day. We are part of the universe FOREVER.

Despite High Finance
Ladies Hear About Russia
J. J. Corbett, Object Lesson
The Pope's Firm Protest

By Arthur Brisbane

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18—In spite of objections from highest financial authority, including Secretary Mellon, the House approves overwhelmingly, 363 to 39, the bill to let veterans borrow one-half the value of their war certificates. If they all borrow one-half, Uncle Sam will have to pay out more than fifteen hundred million dollars, and high finance says that will be ruinous.

As a rule, "big money," which means ability, should receive respectful attention, as does the captain of a ship. But high finance is sometimes mistaken. Big bankers said the Federal Reserve System would ruin the country, because it kept a few men from controlling all the money. They were wrong. Without the Federal Reserve this country would have had a black panic, long ago. They may be wrong in their idea that handing a billion dollars to those that need it, and earned it, will ruin us now.

We spent, gave away and wasted billions by the dozens, in the war, and prosperity did not die. Perhaps some spending at home now will help, instead of hurting. Knowledge is piled up in libraries, the problem is to distribute it. Water is accumulated in lakes and rivers, and distribution is the problem. Money is tied up in financial institutions, a glut of money, the owners cannot lend it. Perhaps distribution there will help.

American women patriots, listening here for three hours, are assured that Russia threatens our institutions, and this land is practically the last refuge of good government, as opposed to Red Russian ideas. Dr. Patmont of California went to Russia, "fooled the secret police, went just wherever he pleased, and saw things behind the scenes that Americans less intelligent never see."

He saw young girls standing in bread lines "with babies born illegitimately under this Soviet system." He saw "wild children, offspring of free love, sanctioned by the Soviet system, roaming around, until they were killed as pests by villagers and their bodies burned."

According to Dr. Patmont, killing folks and burning them seems to be an important feature of Russian life. If Red Russia upsets our government, takes all the money away from Mellon, Rockefeller, Baker and Ford, and gives free divorce to everybody, with wild children roaming around, for convenience, it will not be the fault of Dr. Patmont. He has warned his government.

Meanwhile those Russians, enemies of capitalism do a little capitalistic business on their own account. An American firm, the Ethington Schild Co., has contracted to buy fifty million dollars' worth of furs from Russia, ten million dollars' worth every year, for five years.

And this government, recovering from its Russophobia in a lucid interval, approves the transaction. Also Russia's government spends more than ours and has a surplus, instead of a deficit, and every man in Russia has a job, whether he wants it or not. No idle class allowed. Such a country should be able to feed its wild children.

It pays to care for your health. At the Biltmore Hotel, here, you may see James J. Corbett, who long ago was the world's heavyweight champion ship from John L. Sullivan, looking not older than 40. His hair is thick, and dark, voice as strong as when he fought his big fights. His weight is not 10 pounds above what it was in training, and his chest measurement is at least 10 inches greater than his waist measurement, as it should be.

"Eat little and at regular hours, plenty of fruit, never eat quite as much as you think you want, and never eat unless you are really hungry. Cut down on food, when you cut down on work, as you would do for a horse. Take regular exercise suited to your age, daily baths. Health is man's normal condition. He must do something foolish to lose it. A man should live long and die peacefully and painlessly, like a child going to sleep." Thus spake James J. Corbett.

A group of Italian priests, begging the Pope to "defend the souls of our parishioners satanically besieged and daily exposed to tremendous perils," called from the Pope a protest against Mussolini's government of great historical importance. The Pope said that "through some high phenomenon of telepathy," he had arrived at the same conclusions, and then formulated his grounds on serious complaint against the Mussolini government.

He formally accused the government of permitting and encouraging "the triple evil of 19 More Vice Warrants Sought

POLICE PLAN WHOLESALE ARRESTS

Two Men and a Woman Are Held Today on Stories Told by Schoolgirls

Three more arrests in the vice crusade were made today.

Investigators announced that warrants against 19 more will be sought as a result of stories told by three Dorchester school girls.

One of the girls, it was learned, is seriously ill at the House of the Good Shepherd

Mrs. Joan Fielding, 55, and Joseph Ackerman, 50, both of Commonwealth ave., Brighton, surrendered in Brighton court this morning, and Samuel Gordon, 25, of Leroy st., Dorchester, also made a defendant in a warrant issued yesterday, surrendered at the Back Bay station

Mrs. Fielding and Ackerman with Sidney Winston, 22, State st. lawyer, who surrendered yesterday were arraigned in Brighton court on a total of six warrants

SIX ARRESTS MADE

They pleaded not guilty and the cases were continued until Feb 26. One of the three Dorchester girls was in court with the probation officer prepared to testify if the case had gone on.

Six arrests have already resulted from the girls' stories and a seventh defendant, Joseph Molino, is being sought.

Special Officers Gordon Douglas and Joseph Hart said they expect to make a total of 26 arrests with evidence supplied by the three girls, the oldest of whom is 16

They said they would seek eight warrants in Dorchester court, six on statutory charges and two for larceny, and would ask six more in central municipal court

Among those facing arrest are a druggist, several printers and two men engaged in a radio business

RELEASED ON BAIL

Mrs. Fielding became hysterical in the corridor of the court before she was allowed her freedom on bail of $1000

Ackerman was bailed in $500 Gordon's bail was set at $2500, the amount in which Winston was bailed yesterday

Senators Back Measure, Despite Hoover Letter; Vote Is Due Tomorrow

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP)—The Senate finance committee favored the report on the veterans' loan bill without chance.

Washington, Feb. 18—President Hoover today informed the Senate finance committee of his serious objections to the veterans' loan relief bill.

The President's views were in a letter to Chairman Smoot.

Forwarding of the letter became known as a hearing by the committee was just starting on the House measure.

At the opening Senator Smoot declared his belief that President Hoover will veto the bill.

75 P.C. TO GET LOAN

Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, asked what proportion of veterans would exercise their right to borrow 50 per cent of the bonus certificates. General Hines said:

"If employment conditions continue as now we should be prepared to take care of 75 per cent of the veterans.

"That means 2,550,000 veterans to whom we would pay out $1,-

SULLIVAN'S HOSPITAL RECORD HAS VANISHED

Jury Watchers Think Papers Were Used for Scoring in Card Game

An important exhibit in the Garrett case has mysteriously vanished

Discovery that one of the principal documents used in the first trial was missing was made today during a checkup of the papers in preparation for the second trial.

A checkup of all the many exhibits in the case will be made to determine what other documents have disappeared, it being the belief of officials that several will be found gone.

When word of the missing exhibits ran through the courthouse, it became known that watchers from a courtyard window watched the Garrett jurors in their deliberations after the trial and had seen them playing cards

JURY WAS WATCHED

The watchers reported that the exhibits were scattered about the table and the room and that some of them apparently were being used by the jurors as papers on which to keep score in the card games

When the exhibits were finally returned to the jury to William P. Scribner the court clerk working with him, it is of Oliver R. Garrett, Mrs. Florence H. Garrett and Miss Lillian V. Haich, many were found to bear foreign figures on their backs and in margins.

Daniel J. Gallagher and Herbert F. Callahan, defense counsel, and Asst. Dist.-Atty. Joseph A. Sullivan, one of the two prosecutors at the trial had an appointment today to go over exhibits in the case preparatory to the second trial

DOCUMENT GONE

Defense counsel had not appeared when the first package of exhibits was opened in the office of Clerk Scribner, but Mr. Campbell by his assistant Clerk Prendible

A few minutes later it was discovered that one of the most important of the oil was missing.

The word a record kept at Danvers State Hospital, amid the addition of John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of the old Tritz Hotel, was testified to be gave Garrett money.

The record was introduced in court by Dr. Clarence Pinner, hospital superintendent.

Another of the latest exhibits in this curious were cigar cards, signature cards, transcripts of bank deposits and withdrawals, deposit slips and other banking data

CLERK BLAMES JURY

Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle, who conducted the trial for the Commonwealth, used considerable of the banking and Sullivan material.

The prosecutor assailed the third party in papers of testimony. Sullivan's condition, the prosecutor said, was of the strongest nature in corroboration of the evidence of the Sullivan's own testimony.

According to the prosecutor, the jury had no right to take into the disappearance of the papers from the room they were retired to the jury returned them to the clerk of court after the papers had been signed by Judge Patrick M. Keating

1000 Women Hear Opening of Birth Control Battle

Nearly 1000 women filled Gardner Auditorium of the State House today at a hearing on the birth-control bill, filed on petition of 25 leading physicians

"This legislation is asked for the protection of the health, and perhaps the lives of Massachusetts women, for the happiness of their husbands and children and the welfare of the entire community."

The opposition, organized in large part under the direction of Mrs. Francis E. Slattery of the League of Catholic Women, was prepared to wage vigorous battle against the bill.

ROXBURY WOMAN FOILS ATTEMPTED KIDNAPING OF BABY

ROUTS MAN IN SPITE OF BEATING

Intruder Scales Roofs in an Effort to Make Off With Child

A daring attempt by a man to kidnap the two-year-old daughter of her husband's brother was foiled today by Mrs. Bertha Vollor of 377 Dudley st., Roxbury, in spite of a beating she received from the would-be kidnaper.

Mrs. Vollor told police of the Dudley st. station that repeated demands had been made on her for the child and she usually kept the door locked. She said the parents of the child were involved in marital difficulties and she was caring for the girl.

According to a neighbor, the intruder came over the rooftops to the Vollor home, swung down over the edge of the roof to a piazza and entered the Vollor home.

After her refusal to surrender the child, she said, the man struck her on the chin and knocked her to the floor. When he saw she was putting up a battle he fled.

She described the would-be kidnaper as 25 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, 35 pounds in weight and wore dark clothing. She insisted she never saw him before nor knew no motive for the attempted kidnaping.

immoral newspapers, motion pictures and vaudeville shows," and protested, with especial earnestness against government countenancing of Protestant propaganda, "to an extent that surprises even the Protestants."

The Pope shows physical as well as mental courage in his criticism of Mussolini's conduct and failure to live up to the Lateran Treaty, as the Pope understands it. Mussolini, who was an extreme radical, before he rose to power, is not religious at heart and not fond of criticism. The Pope's tiny dominion lies in the hollow of Mussolini's hand, and Europe must wonder what would happen, if any check to Mussolini's power should threaten.

Postmaster Brown, urging private airmail carriers to do better, with higher speed and fewer charges, reveals the interesting fact that "the military branches of the government are not at all enthusiastic about any part of civil aeronautics might play in any preparedness program." Mr. Brown says the "military branches" speak of civil aeronautics "with some contempt."

The most intelligent men in the Army and Navy are not so foolish, of course. They procure all their planes from civil manufacturers, the government being too dull to manufacture on its own account, and the champion flier of the country, at present, Capt. Hawks, establishing new records, does so as a civilian, backed by a civilian oil company.

If war came, this government would depend entirely on civilian manufacturers.

Aimless speculation and fruitless effort often lead to scientific accomplishment. Chemistry is the successor of ancient alchemy, seeking to change inferior metals to gold. And now the old divining rod, with credulity as its only asset, may be replaced by a "rod" that really locates what you seek.

A needle, called the Hotchkiss super dip, described before the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, takes advantage of the fact that certain deposits disturb the earth's normal magnetic lines. In the hands of a prospector, knowing geology, that new divining rod is expected to reveal deposits of gold and other precious substances. You are not advised to invest in any such contrivance, just yet, but you might speculate on this: what would be the effect on the world's gold standard nations, if it became suddenly possible to multiply the gold supply by 10 or 1000, at little cost?

All girls not over 18 will be barred from these places unless they have notes from their parents it was said.

Max Hoffenberg, the Dorchester sign painter, who was to have been sentenced today following his conviction of three serious charges involving the girls, was surrendered to court by his bondsman, a woman relative. His bail was doubled and sentence was set for Feb 23.

SENTENCE IS DELAYED

He was taken before Chief Justice Hall, who announced that Hoffenberg's lawyer, Frank Juggins was absent because of serious illness in the family and that he could not be present before next Wednesday.

Mrs Fannie Lottensalger of 419 Somerville ave., Somerville, who had posted $4000 bonds for Hoffenberg, then told the court she no longer wished to be surety in the case.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Gillen immediately asked that bail be raised to $10 000 Justice Hall said he himself had suggested that bail be increased inasmuch as the defendant had been found guilty of a felony for which life imprisonment could be imposed. He then set bail at $5000

Mrs. Lottensanger arrived at the court house early this morning and pleaded with him, but did not change her mind and he was given in custody of a court officer to be held if the bail was not forthcoming

Three letters offering information regarding one of those already under arrest were received today by Special Officer Douglas

EVIDENCE DESTROYED

The discovery by Special Officers Hart and Douglas that an attempt had been made to destroy evidence that might be used in the vice inquiry added new interest to the probe today.

Accompanied by two of the school girls the officers went to houses in the Back Bay and Dorchester yesterday and questioned persons the girls pointed out

In a Back Bay house the police found that a page had been torn from the register. This gave the police say, contained the name of a man who had accompanied the girls to the house.

The police learned the identity of the man who took the important record and will apply for two warrants charging larceny

Arrests in Dorchester Court are against men who were present in a lodging house on Columbia rd., near Beaver st., Dorchester with the girls

The police said that this house was pointed out by the girls yesterday

America Misled on Navy, Admiral Fiske Warns

New York, Feb. 18 (US)—This country's statesmen were accused last night of deliberately seeking to confuse the American people on the true strength of their navy in a radio address by Rear-Admiral Bradley A. Fiske (retired), a director of the National Security League.

Speaking over the Columbia System from WABC Admiral Fiske stated that, if statesmen had had an adequate navy at the beginning of the World War, America need not have entered the war. He said

"The refusal of your statesmen to harken to the navy's advice was the cause of all the graves of American soldiers in France."

"STATEMENT UNTRUE"

Turning to the London Naval Conference in 1930, Admiral Fiske said.

"The most important statement made to you by certain statesmen of the American delegation was untrue. That statement was that they had obtained naval parity with Great Britain. On the contrary, they had perpetuated American naval inferiority.

"Naval strength consists of three elements, the fleet, the merchant marine and the naval bases. These elements are, on the whole, of equal importance. Now the only element in which the majority of American delegates made any effort toward parity was in the fleets. But they did not attain even that."

TWO-HOUR LIMIT

Declaring that in the next war this country will be in a perilous position, the admiral said:

"Your economic prosperity rests ultimately on your ability to defend it. Your prosperity can mount to dizzy heights. But it can be absolutely shattered and your commerce ousted from every sea by one naval battle lasting two hours, if your fleet is defeated as the Russian fleet was defeated by the Japanese."

NEW CABINET IN SPAIN; KING KEEPS THRONE

Revolt Averted as Monarchist Group Reaches Agreement With Alfonso

Barcelona, Spain, Feb. 18 (AP)—About 100 persons, reputed to be anarchists, were arrested here today when police raided their headquarters. A large quantity of radical literature was seized.

Madrid, Feb. 18 (AP)—After four days of political turmoil and uncertainty, Spain today had a new monarchist cabinet, avoiding revolution on the one hand and dictatorship on the other.

Admiral Juan Bautista Aznar, the oldest ranking officer in the Spanish navy and generally regarded as a neutral in politics, succeeded where Jose Sanchez Guerra and Melquiades Alvarez had failed.

At one o'clock he brought a new cabinet to the royal palace and the members were sworn in before the King.

"My program can be only the restoration of normality, both legal and political," said the new premier.

"Tomorrow we shall begin at once to consider the question of elections, which is of paramount importance right now. We shall deal also with the matter of amnesty for political prisoners and with other problems requiring immediate attention."

Miss Gallagher, who was cut about the face and hands, is a sister of ex-Mayor Philip J. Gallagher of Woburn. Doherty, operator of the trolley car is a former alderman.

All the windows on one side of the car was smashed and the glass was driven at the occupants with great force. There was a wild scramble for the doors as the car stopped.

John E. Crowley of Sullivan st., Charlestown, driver of the truck, said he swerved to the right to give the car plenty of room, but the wheels struck a ridge of ice, throwing his vehicle against the car. Both vehicles were going toward Winchester.

Manitoba Grads Win 26th Victory

Davos, Switzerland, Feb. 18 (AP)—The University of Manitoba grads, world's amateur hockey champions, won their 26th straight victory of their European tour today, defeating Davos five goals to two.

Morris scored twice for the Canadians, Bunny McVey and Wilkinson were the other scorers. MacKenzie played a nice game for the grads, co-operating in two of the goals.

fessor of ethics and sociology of Boston College, occupied a front row seat and was to speak later when the opposition had its innings

"The fundamental purpose of this bill is to make it perfectly clear that physicians duly registered may legally prescribe measures for women, for protection of their health and the cure and prevention of disease," said Dr. Smith.

"This bill is not a general birth control bill in the sense in which that term is ordinarily used. The purpose is not to restrict births but control health.

"The measure is not intended for the benefit of physicians, but will enable them to safeguard the health of their patients. The present law authorizes advice on certain measures under certain circumstances, it is believed, but the petitioners wish it more clearly stated.

SANCTIONED BY CHURCHES

Thirty-one States permit what this bill would have Massachusetts permit. Doctors will not take advantage of such legislation. The danger that unscrupulous doctors might do so is no greater than under present conditions.

"In the past few years employment of these measures under certain circumstances has been sanctioned by the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Central Conference of Jewish Rabbis, the Congregational Churches of Connecticut, the Universalist General Council, American Unitarian Association, Lambeth Conference of Angelican Bishops, the Massachusetts Federation of Churches and the Greater Boston Federation of Churches."

SUNDAY TELLS HOW THE DEVIL FIGURES IT

Satan Monologue Given by the Evangelist; Says That Many Church Folk Are Dead Ones

("Billy" Sunday feature and picture on Page 12)

"Billy" Sunday quoted "the devil's monologues" for his capacity audience at Tremont Temple today and painted the downfall of "pretty maids, young men, sharp-tongued women, lazy people and atheists."

He also rebuked inactive church members, saying:

"Many church people are dead and don't know it; all they're doing is saving money for funeral expenses.

"They're as slow-moving as a team of horses a friend of mine had. Those horses were so slow they couldn't get a corpse to the cemetery before the Resurrection."

"Here's one of the devil's monologues: I have a rendezvous with a pretty maid who wants to see life in the great city, to peer into forbidden places. There she will meet me, though she won't recognize me until it's too late.

"She'll see the dashing young man about town who promises her beauty and charm. He's the one through whom I'll begin her downfall. She'll drink, dance, laugh and play the roadhouses, and pity the strait-laced girls back on Main st.

"Then down, down, she'll plunge, until she becomes a bleary-eyed, hideous hag, and then I'll laugh at the finished product."

He admonished his audience to do their best, to avoid indecision, saying:

"The man who doesn't decide he will do the thing that is right has already decided that under certain circumstances he will do the thing that is wrong. It's only a question of time and temptation as to where he'll land."

FAKE 'INJURIES' BARED IN TRIAL

The story of an "accident" that he said didn't happen was related today in Middlesex court by James J. McDevitt of Woonsocket, R. I., one of 18 defendants who pleaded guilty to insurance frauds as the trial of 10 remaining defendants was resumed

McDevitt told of planning an accident to Joseph Lemay of Lawrence, another who has pleaded guilty, with Thomas J. Murphy a former adjuster who is still on trial

"Murphy told me there was a fellow in Boston who was in against it, and he thought it best to have a little accident," McDevitt testified. He said the two took places in a Hudson garage, where McDevitt was employed

"Later we met George Holway and Lemay, and Lemay said he was loafing and needed money.

BANDAGED BY DOCTOR

"He and I decided on the Central Depot as a good place for the accident, and went there, but there was no accident

"Then we went to Dr. Irving Armstrong's office and Murphy was talking to the doctor.

"Lemay was told to strip to the waist and Dr. Armstrong wound bandages around him."

McDevitt was asked if he saw blood on Lemay's shoulder and forehead and he replied "No"

The defendants include six physicians, a dentist, a lawyer, and two insurance adjusters. They are represented by Attorneys J. Tierney Francis P Garland and Frank O'Connell

MRS. COULSON TELLS COURT OF CRUELTY

Auburnda'e Wife Granted Decree and Custody of Children; Suit Uncontested

A husband's alleged threat to shoot her won a divorce in Middlesex Probate Court today for Mrs. Dorothy C. Coulson of Auburndale from Frederick B Coulson on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

She told of testifying that when she refused to return a book on matrimony to her husband, he told her he would shoot her.

"He said he would go to the electric chair for it as I didn't have him the book," Mrs. Coulson told the court.

DECREE GRANTED

Mrs Coulson said she found the book in her husband's clothing that she had taken it and kept it.

Judge Charles S. Harris, hearing the uncontested divorce plea, granted the decree nisi and awarded custody of two minor children to the wife.

"On Oct. 16, 1930, at our Auburndale home, my husband came in one morning around 2 o'clock. He came to my room and started rummaging through the bureau drawers," Mrs. Coulson told the court. "He was very noisy. I asked him to be quiet as the children were asleep. He continued to rummage and started to tear up some letters and postcards he had sent me at various times.

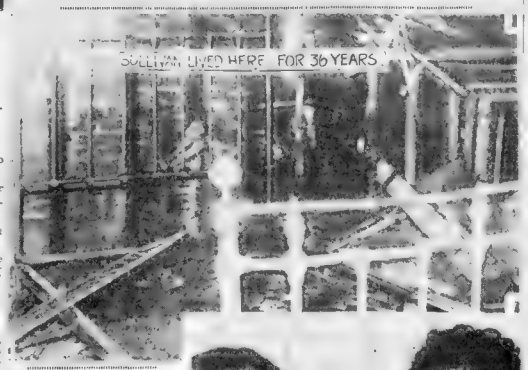
"When I asked him to stop, he told me it was none of my business and swore at me. He hit me on the jaw and knocked me down."

HUSBAND STRUCK HER

Testifying to another instance of cruelty, when she refused to argue with him, Mrs. Coulson testified that her husband came over to her bed and struck her.

Because she commented that her husband should have been of some assistance to a girl whose kidnaping they witnessed while driving in their automobile in Boston, he got angry and swore at her and when they arrived home struck her, the wife said.

DEATH ENDED 36 YR. STAY HERE



RUINS OF THE attic room, 31 East Canton st., South End, where James Sullivan, who had occupied it for the past 36 years, was burned to death today. Fire trapped him as he tried to make his way to safety.

TRAPPED AS HE TRIES TO FLEE TO SAFETY

Other Occupants of the House Are Routed in Rain When Flames Sweep Building

In a small room that was his home for 36 years, James Sullivan, 55, a city employe, met death today when fire swept the upper floors of 31 East Canton st., South End.

His body was not found until after identification was delayed several hours.

Sullivan was the only person in the house who failed in making their way to safety. His body was found by Capt. John Lavan of Ladder 15 who was fighting the blaze on the upper floor.

Its position indicated that Sullivan was making a desperate effort to escape when he became unconscious.

FIRE SPREADS RAPIDLY

The fire broke out in the rear ell of the building and swept upward through the roof and down into the second floor. Occupants fled to the streets in terror some clad only in nightclothing, and remained there despite a driving rain. They returned to their homes when firemen assured them all was safe.

The flames leaped from the burning roof to the roofs of the dwellings on each side of the burning building. Occupants of these houses becoming panic stricken, also fled to the streets.

SEEN BY PASSER-BY

Fire officials estimated total damage of $2500 to the three buildings. The building at 31 was most heavily damaged, the total being $2500. At 33 the damage, which was confined to the roof, was estimated at $500 while at 29 the loss was estimated at $100.

The alarm was turned in by a passer-by who also summoned police. They helped firemen to rouse occupants of the burning building.

In addition to Sullivan, the building at 31 was occupied by Mrs. Lucretia Greene and Miss Thomas. At 29 the tenants were Henry J Cody, Mrs Emily Fahey and Mrs Matilda Wilkes while at 33 the dwelling was occupied by Matta Mossoul.

THAW AND RAIN FLOOD CELLARS

Rain-swept New England had itself out of floods today only to face a typical nor'easter due to hit the coastline tonight.

Flooded cellars, street traffic swollen brooks and high tides caused unestimated property damage interrupted train service and bare the snow covered hills for the first time in four months.

The brook overflowed into both streets and ice-clogged sewers failed to carry off the rush. Consequently settled in the street to a depth of more than a foot and seeped into cellars in high spots.

Roberts rd. West Medford, was another spot that resembled a river. Ice and snow in open fields melted with the rain and the waters rushed to the street too fast to be carried off by the drainage.

The storm came up from the Virginia coast settled for a while over Rhode Island and Southern Massachusetts and then started out eastward.

Northeast storm warnings were ordered from Boston to Eastport. The weather bureau predicted gales. Like northeast winds tonight.

There may be a slight shift in the winds to-night or tomorrow the bureau reports, but the weather will remain thick overcast and rainy.

Snow was falling near the mouth of the St Lawrence river but temperatures near freezing mark in New England kept the precipitation to one of rain.

There is a possibility of a shift in winds to the northwest tomorrow, with clear and colder weather possible tomorrow.

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today rejected unanimously the Niagara Falls power treaty with Canada.

Chairman Borah announced the committee desired to have the power matter treated as a separate matter from the other treaty provisions relating to the preservation of the scenic beauty of the Falls.

He related the testimony of Brig. Gen. Pillsbury of the Army Engineers that the contract for power allowed under the treaty would be worth $5,000,000 to the power companies.

Senator Borah said

"It is the view of the committee that the government of the United States insofar as its part is concerned, do this work direct and not enter into a contract with private power companies and pay the price which is here proposed to be paid."

The next President of the United States will be a Democrat and four members of the Massachusetts delegation in the 1932 will be Democrats, Charles H. McGlue, former chairman of the Democratic State committee today predicted to the Joint Legislative Committee on Constitutional Law.

He appeared for proposed amendments to the Constitution for the division of the State into single districts.

"With a Democratic president in the offing" said McGlue "there will soon be a Democratic majority in the Massachusetts House and Senate.

"These bills are to prevent gerrymandering, an atrocious way of dividing the state. Two-thirds of the State Senators in Massachusetts should come from the cities. It is time the towns in this State ceased to run the cities. We are not going through another Republican apportionment."

He said that if an honest division had been made Lowell would be a single district. Being a double district, wards 1, 2 and 10 being saddled in 10 Republican towns, the Democratic majority of the city was wiped out and a Republican elected.

DIVORCE PLEA BARES WEDDING

Rarely does a divorce court disclose a secret marriage of more than a year before, but that's exactly what happened to Mrs. Gertrude Brady Caswell, secret bride of Merrill C. Caswell, Tufts '26, a civil engineer.

Hundreds of friends did not know of the marriage at Nashua, N. H., in December, 1929, it developed today until news of Mrs. Caswell's petition for divorce on grounds of cruelty was heard in Middlesex court.

The 22-year-old bride of 14 months told a story in court including the admission that she gave her young husband was buying gifts for another woman

"He was buying gifts for this girl, but when I asked him for money to pay my board he tried to choke me," she testified.

He beat me so on I found him in a parked auto with another girl last October," she said.

She said their friendship started in a Revere manufacturing plant developed into the marriage at Nashua, and ended with separation in August.

Judge Arthur D. Keans took the petition under advisement

VALENTINO WOULD HAVE MADE TALKIES, HE REVEALS

FILM LOVER REPLIES CLEARLY FROM LAND OF SPIRITS

In yesterday's instalment of this absorbing narrative the author described the arrangements for a seance with George Wehner, medium, through which a series of 12 questions were to be submitted to Rudolph Valentino. With the author, Ruth Roland, the screen actress; a stenographer, and others present in a large studio, the medium went into a trance. The author told how the voice of Valentino's mother spoke through the medium, saying that her son's spirit would be pleased to communicate with them. The narrative now continues:

By R. T. M. SCOTT,

Chairman New York Section, American Society for Psychical Research.

George Wehner, the medium, wriggled in his chair. He stretched his arms and legs. His face twitched and showed signs of strong emotion. After quite a long pause some repose came to the dramatic figure. Words began to come again and in a fairly strong voice. In the great photographic studio the alleged spirit of Valentino was speaking to the world again. The sitters straightened a little in their chairs and the pencil of the stenographer flew over the pages of her notebook.

VALENTINO (To Ruth Roland): I am glad to see you. Do you remember me?

RUTH ROLAND: Very well.

VALENTINO: Let me hear your voice again.

RUTH ROLAND: What do you want me to say, Rudolph?

VALENTINO: Just that. I wanted to hear your voice. I am very glad to be here and able to talk to you. Strange, isn't it?

RUTH ROLAND: Very strange.

VALENTINO: Sad, too, in a way. It is sad.

RUTH ROLAND: Very sad.

VALENTINO (To the Writer): You have questions?

THE WRITER: Yes. Will you answer some questions for us?

In the third installment of this "interview" to-morrow's edition the author will tell the answer to the question by Valentino as to how he died.

VALENTINO: Very well: You shall give them.

With sudden violence the medium tore his vest open and pulled awkwardly at his collar and tie as if needing more air. He slumped back in his chair with eyes closed and head hanging forward and down. Slowly I began to read certain questions which had been sent in by readers.

QUESTION: Does a person on this earth need to be psychic in order to communicate with a person who has died and does such a communication have to pass through a medium?

VALENTINO: I would say that anyone in the earth world, who desired to communicate with one who had passed over, would have to be psychic to get a communication. And what was that about a medium?

PART OF QUESTION REPEATED: And does such a communication have to pass through a medium?

VALENTINO: It would not because the person getting the communication would be his own medium. He would be psychic. Psychic means sensitive. Such a person would have to be psychic enough to feel the vibrations.

QUESTION: If you had lived would you have gone into the talkies?

VALENTINO: I think I would have because I had a good voice—so people said. I used to sing, although I did not have a trained voice for singing. I even made several records.

I think I sang one time something about pale hands—Pale Hands Beside the Shalimar. It wasn't a success, but I believe it would have sounded well in the talkies. I would have loved to have gone into the talkies.

QUESTION: What is the relation of man and wife in the spirit world? Are they together, or aren't those things important?

VALENTINO: I think it is very important, the relation of man and wife in the spirit world. It all depends on what they meant to each other. If there was great love between them, then most certainly they are united, because you cannot sever love in reality. It is all that lasts. If they did not love one another, but were bound by legal or earthly ties, they may find themselves free from one another at death. If either the husband or the wife had injured the other, they would be bound together until they had worked that out and had come to a harmonious understanding.

QUESTION: Is one immediately cured after death of the disease from which he died?

VALENTINO: In a certain sense most decidedly, because the disease is left off with the physical body, but the mental conception of that disease may remain with the spirit after passing into the astral plane for some time. In that sense, the spirit might be earth-bound in the vibration of the disease.

I have seen many instances of that where some spirits seem to suffer from the effects of a disease they had on earth. But that doesn't last very long unless the disease made a strong mental impression.

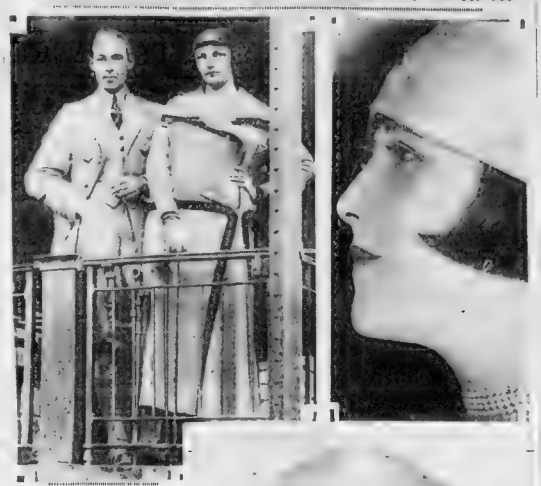
Valentino Has 'Talk' With Ruth Roland



FROM THE supposed voice of Rudolph Valentino from the mystery world came an answer indicating that relation of man and wife in that great beyond all depended on what they meant to each other on earth. Here you see the great sheik with one of his wives. She was Winifred Hudnut, known on stage as Natacha Rambova. (international Newsreel.)

RUTH ROLAND, who claims to have talked to Rudolph Valentino at seance held with George Wehner, medium. The alleged voice of Rudy first asked Ruth to speak to him. She did, and Rudy replied. At top is photo of Jean Acker, Rudy's first wife.

THE TWELVE QUESTIONS

At the seance described in the accompanying article by R. T. M. Scott these twelve questions to Rudolph Valentino were submitted through George Wehner, the medium:

Does a person on this earth need to be psychic in order to communicate with a person who has died, and does such a communication have to pass through a medium?

If you had lived, would you have gone into the talkies?

What is the relation of husband and wife in the spirit world? Are they together or aren't those things important?

Is one immediately cured after death of the disease from which he died?

Do people ever return to this world as ghosts, perhaps?

Can you communicate with anyone as you would like, or must you be sent by a higher power?

Are you thoroughly settled in your present sphere or will you move on to other places?

Who is, in your opinion, the greatest film star today?

Have you ever returned to haunt your house in Hollywood?

Had you any premonition that you were going to die?

Do you see Lon Chaney? What film folk are your friends now in spirit land?

HOW DID YOU DIE? WAS THERE ANY JUSTIFICATION IN THE RUMORS OF SHOOTING OR POISONING?

DRINK AND WIN, SAYS NICKALLS

London, Feb. 18 (AP)—In all his years as a rowing coach in the United States Guy Nickalls, famous Oxford oarsman, declared in a letter printed today drinking athletes showed their superiority every time over teetotalers.

The letter was his contribution to the controversy which began when Nancy, Lady Astor, told the House of Commons that England lost on the cricket field because her players drank.

"In my own experience as an oarsman over 28 years," Mr. Nickalls wrote, "I was never beaten by a teetotaler. I represented my country in my 42d year and I drank all the alcohol, wine and beer I could buy, borrow or be stood."

HOLDUP BALKED BY VICTIMS

Brockton, Feb. 18—What with rain and holdup men, the romantic tryst of Henry Evans of Main st., and Raymond Woods of Perkins ave., called a bit around the edges last night—but they saved their money and their girls.

Evans and Woods reported to police that while seated in Evans' parked automobile in D. W. Field parkway, talking with two girls and listening to the beat of rain on the roof-top, three men drove up.

Two of the men were shabbily dressed, but the third had on a smart coat and hat, in decided contrast. Two of the trio had guns and the spokesman ordered Evans and Woods to: "Fork over everything you've got."

Evans, instead, suddenly started the , caromed off the bandit car which had been left up ahead, and sped away in the night as one shot sounded behind. It apparently went wild, however.

Pair Lost on Desert Found by Airmen

Cairo, Egypt, Feb. 18 (AP)—Two Englishmen lost in the desert between here and Dakhla for two days have been located by a Royal Air Force plane and a rescue party has gone for them. A Siwa telegraph official named Newport and a companion lost their way after their auto broke down. The plane, sighting them, dropped food and water and radioed their position to Cairo.

DADDY OF THE YD

An Intimate Story of the Life of General Clarence R. Edwards

By HARRY A. BENWELL

As the time for his graduation from Brooks Military School drew near, young Clarence Edwards was definitely determined on a military career.

The pomp and ceremony, the action and color of army life, and the crashing splendor which in peace as war, exercised an irresistible fascination for the boy, and thrilled him to the depths of his being.

Naturally there was some family opposition. His father was building up the William Edwards Co., the wholesale grocery concern which grew into an $11,000,000 corporation, and had thought of taking Clarence into the business together with his brother Harry.

Also Mrs. Edwards had the normal mother's reluctance to turning her son over to the military machine. No doubt there are few women who joyously consecrated their sons to the service of the war god, but most others regard the idea with great dread.

However, "Col." Edwards was eminently fair and just, and when convinced of the intensity of feeling with which Clarence regarded a soldier's life, he capitulated.

Goes to West Point
Father's Partner Appoints Young Clarence to Academy

Mrs. Edwards was then won over, and it was decided to send the youth to West Point provided of course an appointment could be obtained, and Clarence could pass the examinations.

As it happened, Congressman Amos Townsend was a partner of the elder Edwards in the wholesale grocery business, and in 1878, when Clarence was 19, the longed-for appointment was made.

Never was a youth so happy and never were examinations attacked with greater zest and vigor, with the result that the young man passed with flying colors and was accepted.

Then ensued an exciting period. Edwards mansion with excitement, anxious to be off and fearful lest reluctant to let him go.

He was six feet tall, straight as a ramrod, and filled with eagerness for the new life opening before him.

An evidence of his immediate popularity with his classmates is the fact that he was promptly nicknamed "Sent," probably because he entered the Academy in September.

A Real Soldier
Old Nurse Tells of Family's Pride in the Cadet

Years later his old nurse, Kate Nolte, who served the Edwards family for more than 50 years, and who passed away, she told of [illegible]

"The proudest time in his life, and his mother and father's, she said, "was when he came home on his first furlough from West Point, bringing reports of his high standing.

"He was as straight as a stick. His brass buttons shone. He was every inch a soldier. I knew then he would be a great man.

"He was a soldier when I first saw him, a little 'tyke' hardly able to lift his toy gun, and he has been a soldier ever since.

"But the proudest moment [illegible] when [illegible] but they were proud and glad. He had graduated at the head of his class, and the family was sure he would never stop going ahead until he became a general.

"There was great times at the Edwards home while he was at home waiting for orders. His father and mother gave parties to which everybody who was anybody in Cleveland was invited.

Inculcates Fine Love
[illegible] Stands Through Life

"You must rest assured the girls all enjoyed it, but Clarence wanted to get into active service. He wanted his officer's shoulder straps and a chance to wear a sword and command men."

Young Edwards had displayed his character on graduation from West Point by asking that he be assigned to the infantry. His duty and observations while [illegible] the academy had convinced him that infantry is the backbone of the army and that real military service was to be obtained in that branch.

His opinion in this regard was never changed and throughout his military career he was always a staunch partisan of the infantry. In later years, Gen. Edwards founded the Infantry Journal, to which he was a contributor and it is said that most of the later day efficiency of the American infantry is due to his work.

At last the coveted commission as second lieutenant came through and Edwards was assigned to the 23d Infantry, then stationed at old Fort Union, New Mexico.

He was now in very truth a soldier of Uncle Sam.

GANGSTER SLAIN TO AVENGE 2

Chicago, Feb. 18 (AP)—Albert Courchene, 35, a city plumbing inspector who last summer was arrested in the killing of two plumbers' union agents, was shot to death by machine gun bullets today as he directed work on a South Side building.

A score of shots were fired from a sedan in which two men drove past the house. Six bullets entered Courchene's chest, abdomen and legs.

Police expressed the opinion he was slain in retaliation for the killing of Charles Mulcahy and Matthew Rueberry last August.

In August he was arrested with Charles Stein, son of his employer, but a coroner's jury refused to hold them.

Railroad Up Death Valley Is Junked

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP)—The last attempt to maintain railroad service in Death Valley, California, will be given up as the result of an order issued today by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The Death Valley Railroad Co., which invested $365,000 in a line traversing a portion of the desert, was permitted to take up its rails.

Copley Ball Brilliant Event

Society Leaders Don Their Most Picturesque Costumes for Mardi Gras

WITH ONE OF THE MOST gorgeous balls in the history of Boston, the Copley Society held a Mardi Gras revel in the Imperial ballroom of the Hotel Statler last evening. It will be remembered as one of the outstanding events of the social season, both in merry-making and in eye-arresting splendor. The entrance demanded fancy dress and no one was admitted unless they appeared in costume of some previous or future age. The picture in the ballroom was like a rare medieval painting, the various figures dancing kaleidoscopically before the onlooker, and for variety and color combination it outshone any ball given by the society.

PRESIDENT THEODORE G FROTHINGHAM arrived in the full dress of the English Hunt and Mrs. Frothingham came as a lady of the Chinese court. Mr Grenby A. Court was a convincing mandarin and Mrs. Court wore a unique gift bearer regalia. Another member of the entertainment committee, Miss Grace Nichols, was transformed into a Spanish grandee of 1850 in a magnificent green and black gown which she brought from Madrid, and Mrs. Lee W. Court was a patrician lady of 1890 in leg o' mutton sleeves. Another early American was Mrs. Calvin G. Page in costume of 1817, which included a huge poke with feathers, and Mrs. Thomas G Allen left her native shores to impersonate a grand lady of the movenage in black velvet and diamonate.

AMONG THE YOUNG FOLKS was Miss Elizabeth Wells in black Viennese dress, most becoming, and Miss Edith Mitton made a lovely belle of 1800. Barbara Holdsworth and Eleanor Chamberlain took part in a lovely dance, similar to a minuet, the Spanish Pavanne, in which also appeared Miss Charlotte White in geranium pink with Mr. Chaget Wilson as her dancing partner. Miss Eleanor Strickland, who gave a large dinner party preceding the ball, wore one of the most effective costumes of the ball, a light blue ruffled muslin in the mode of 1850, which suited her delicate beauty, and among her guests was Miss Rosamond Holton, a bright-eyed miss of 1840.

MISS BARBARA HOLDSWORTH and Miss Eleanor Chamberlain were in the group who danced the Spanish Pavanne at the Copley Society Fine Arts Ball last evening in the Imperial ballroom at the Hotel Statler. It was one of the most brilliant social events held in Boston in recent years. (Staff photos.)

COL. FROTHINGHAM MRS. FROTHINGHAM

COL. THOMAS G. FROTHINGHAM, president of the Copley Society, attended the ball attired in the full dress of the English Hunt, pink coat and black satin breeches, while Mrs. Frothingham impersonated a lady of the Chinese court.

MISS ELIZABETH WELLS, one of the beautiful debutantes of this season, daughter of Mrs. Channing Wells, was gowned as a Viennese belle at the costume ball held in the grand ballroom of the Statler last night. Hundreds attended the colorful social event.

Debs and Sub-Debs Wear Costumes of Many Foreign Lands

CONSTANCE YOUNG DISGUISED as a mid-Victorian and Dorothy Austin an overwhelming Queen Elizabeth, looked most unrealistic. Miss Priscilla Hedge was noticeable for the simplicity of a white mull dress, long and slim with baby blue sash, and Alice Graves was a lovely Florentine with plumed chapeau. Mr and Mrs. Talbot B. Aldrich were noticed in the throng of dancers, Mrs. Aldrich a Russian court lady and Mr. Aldrich a most effective Egyptian. Olga Rooke also appeared in the costume of the Russian court, very elaborate and quite in keeping with her personality.

DEBORAH HALL WAS A charming little Normandie miss and Kitty Burrage never looked more beautiful than in the white lace Spanish effect with red roses which she wore, surrounded by pirates, bandits and gentlemen. Dorothy Preston, always noted for her cherry wit, appeared in a bouffant gown of a by-gone day and Charlotte Smith wore a stunning Russian Cossack garb. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Emmons Pearson and Miss Nelia Pearson appeared as members of the French court and their costumes were magnificent. Mrs. William Dana Orcutt made a delightful Dolly Varden and Mrs. James A. Nelson wore a beautiful Spanish shawl. Mrs. Frederick G. Jennings and Mrs. L. T. Flanders were merry little mandarins who gave the password as you entered. The proceeds will go toward the building fund which will finance a permanent home for the society.

George G. Crockers Off on Extended Tour of Europe

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE G. CROCKER of Milton have sailed for Europe to be gone for a couple of months. Their young folks, Mr. and Mrs. George G. Crocker, Jr., who returned in December from their wedding trip, are occupying the family homestead while their parents are away.

MRS. CHARLES HIGGINSON of Cohasset is leaving today for Nassau, journeying by train to Miami and flying the remainder of the distance. Mr. Higginson will join her later in the month. They will return in time to give the ushers' dinner before the dance being given for their niece, Miss Katie Johnson, on March 7, by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Johnson of Cohasset. Miss Katie is a sub-debutante and will be presented next season.

HOOVER CALLS BONUS BILL MENACE

233,000,000. Subtract from that the $330,000,000 already loaned and this bill will cost just less than $1,000,000,000."

"The country should not be called upon directly or indirectly to make loans to those who can help themselves," he said.

He expressed fear the legislation would "prolong the period" of distress.

WILL VETO MEASURE

He took the estimate of Hines that 75 per cent of the veterans would take advantage of the loans, thus involving $1,000,000,000 to be raised by the treasury.

Mr. Hoover's letter, in part, follows:

"The proposal is to authorize loans, upon the certificates up to 50 per cent of their face value, and to avoid confusion it must be understood that the face value is the sum payable at the end of the 20-year period (1945) being based on the additional compensation to veterans of about $2,000,000,000 granted about six years ago, plus 25 per cent for deferment, plus 4 per cent compound interest for the 20-year period.

MANY OBJECTIONS.

"As the 'face value' is about $3,625,000,000, loans at 50 per cent thus create a potential liability for the government of about $1,712,000,00. The total cash which might be required to be raised by the treasury is about $1,250,000,000 if all should apply.

"The administrator of veterans' affairs informs me that he estimates that 75 per cent of the veterans may be expected to claim the loans and the sum of approximately $1,000,000,000 will need to be raised by the treasury.

"There are a number of most serious objections, some of which are matters of method and some are matters of fundamental principle affecting the future of our country and the service men themselves.

700,000 AIDED NOW

"Over 700,000 World War veterans or their dependents are today receiving monthly allowances. The country should not be called upon, however, either directly or indirectly, to support or make loans to those who can by their own efforts support themselves.

"By far the largest part of the huge sum proposed in this bill is to be available to those who are not in distress.

"This legislation might quite well result in a prolongation of unemployment and suffering in which veterans will themselves suffer with others.

"By our expansion of public construction for assistance to unemployment we have imposed upon ourselves a deficit in this fiscal year of upwards of $300,000,000, which must be obtained by issue of securities to the investing public. This bill may possibly require the securing of a further billion of money from the public.

MUST SELL TO PUBLIC

"Beyond this, the government is faced with a billion dollars of early maturities of outstanding debts which must be refunded.

"There seems to be a misunderstanding in the proposal that the government's securities already lodged with the treasury to the amount of over $700,000,000 as a reserve against these certificates constitute available cash to meet this potential liability.

"The cash required by the veterans can only be secured by the sale of these securities to the public.

"The legislation is defective in that this $700,000,000 of Government securities is wholly inadequate to meet either a potential liability of $1,380,000,000 or approximately $1,000,000,000 estimated as possible by the administrator of veterans' affairs.

STRAIN ON SAVINGS.

"Placing a strain on the savings needed for rehabilitation of employment by a measure which calls upon the Government for a vast sum beyond the call of distress, and so adversely affecting our general situation, will in my view not only nullify the benefit to the veterans but inflict injury to the country as a whole."

Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, asked Chairman Smoot after the letter was read if he thought President Hoover would veto the bill.

"I think he will," said Smoot.

Senator Reed said "that is a fair interpretation of his letter."

Hines recommended two proposals—limitation of loans to those in distress and payment of the loan over monthly or quarterly periods.

Hines estimated about 200,000 or 300,000 veterans were in distress and in need of loans.

"UGLY SKIN MADE ME AN OUTCAST"

but almost overnight it was a different story

"Skin eruptions and blackheads repel others. Squeezing only made my skin sore and blotchy. I had given up hope of relief when a friend told me to get Rowles Mentho-Sulphur. She explained how its Phenol removes infection as its Sulphur clears the skin and the Menthol soothes and heals the sore, raw tissue. Overnight I looked better. And in a few days my skin was clear.

With amazing ease, Rowles Mentho-Sulphur safely clears the skin. It is also good for dry skin, itching fortures and eczema. Insist on Rowles Mentho-Sulphur for best results. All druggists.

BULL, K.C., HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Chicago, Feb. 18 (AP)—The Chicago Herald and Examiner said today that W. Perkins Bull, K. C., Canadian narcotics, whose Chicago apartment recently was visited by federal narcotic agents, was injured, perhaps fatally, today, while riding to Detroit in an automobile. His car collided with the trailer of a motor truck.

Bernard Magruder, a vice-president of the Horlick Malted Milk Company, riding with Bull, and Carl Franklin Moore, driver of the machine, also were hurt. Bull suffered fractures of both hips and internal injuries.

Bull had been under subpoena to appear today before a master in chancery at a hearing on an injunction asked by Dr. John Streeter Sidley, estranged husband of Mrs. Maybelle Horlick. Sidley is seeking to enjoin Bull from allegedly employing private detectives to shadow him.

Mrs. Sidley's Chicago apartment was visited by the narcotic agents at the same time that they called at Bull's place, but the incident was later described by counsel for the principals as a "mistake."

NEW STRIKES AT BARTLETT ON P. O. LEASES

Washington, Feb. 18 (INS)—Former Postmaster-General Harry S. New struck back at his enemies today before the Senate postoffice lease investigating committee and blamed Congress for the evils developing from the postoffice department leasing policy.

He said he had urged the government build and own its postoffices in five of his six annual reports.

New paid his respects to John H. Bartlett of New Hampshire, who who his first assistant postmaster-general, in biting terms. It was Bartlett's testimony holding New responsible for the St. Paul lease "scandal," including a charge of interfering with a federal grand jury investigation, that caused New's voluntary appearance before the committee.

THROUGH BARTLETT

He hurled back at Bartlett the responsibility for all leases and said:

URGED UTMOST CARE

He said Bartlett's dislike for him was "notorious throughout the service" and that he "apparently was obsessed with the idea that he ought to be postmaster-general."

"I endured the official relation with him all these years merely because that on the one point of his capacity as a trader I did place confidence."

New Fuel Makes Italy Independent in Time of War

Rome, Feb. 18 (INS)—In an effort to render Italy independent of foreign fuel supplies in time of war, Italian engineers have evolved a new fuel for automobile and airplane engines, said to be completely successful.

The fuel is said to be especially good for aviation purposes, since it retains its liquidity at 22 degrees below zero.

10-YR. FIGHT ON SHOALS ENDS

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP)—The 10-year old deadlock between House and Senate over Muscle Shoals legislation was definitely broken today.

The Senate conferees and a majority of the House managers signed a compromise agreement for operation of the government $150,000,000 power and nitrate plant and the report will be submitted to the House tomorrow.

The agreement provides for government operation of the power plant, lease of the nitrate plants for production of fertilizer and by-products if possible, and government construction of power transmission lines for distribution of electricity from Wilson dam.

MILLIONS FOR POSTOFFICES

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP)—The second deficiency bill carrying $59,108,000 to care for exigencies in various government departments this year and allocating $69,940,000 for public buildings throughout the country was received today by the House from its appropriations committee.

Of the total, $23,668,000 was set aside for the veterans' administration.

Among the provisions in the bill are the following:

East Greenwich, R. I., postoffice, $55,000. Easthampton, Mass., postoffice, $100,000. Hallowell, Me., postoffice, $78,000. Littleton, N. H., postoffice and courthouse, $265,000.

Lynn, Mass., postoffice, $700,000. Manchester, Conn., postoffice, $135,000. Middleboro, Mass., postoffice, $105,000. New London, Conn., postoffice, $420,000. Middlebury, Vt., postoffice, $90,000. Norwood, Mass., postoffice, $130,000. Orono, Me., postoffice, $80,000. Pawtucket, R. I., postoffice, cost limited increased to $460,000.

Rockland, Mass., postoffice, $115,000. Presque Isle, Me., postoffice, $105,000. Provincetown, Mass., postoffice, $120,000. Somersworth, N. H., postoffice, $75,000.

UNIVERSAL BUYS 'BACK STREET' BY FANNIE HURST FOR ROSE HOBART

JOHN M. STAHL SIGNED TO DIRECT FEATURE FILM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service.
(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 18—Have you read "Back Street" by Fannie Hurst? It has been appearing serially in the Cosmopolitan Magazine and it's the best novel Miss Hurst has ever written and for that matter one of the best modern novels any author has given us. There are times when Miss Hurst becomes so much a stylist that we are more intrigued with her words than with her story.

In this case she forgets words and gets right into the heart of a story that for originality, interest and for construction should win the Pulitzer prize.

Louella O. Parsons

Universal has bought Miss Hurst's "Back Street" for Rose Hobart. Who better than Miss Hobart could play the futile Julie of Rose Schultz. John M. Stahl will direct and Universal follow the story I look to see it another one of the big pictures of the year.

LILYAN TASHMAN, often called the best dressed woman in Hollywood, has been signed by the Paramount Company to take Kay Francis' place. Miss Tashman, who already has a following and who is much in demand as a popular screen homewrecker, has put her name to a five-year contract. The same tactics used to build Miss Francis will be used to establish Lilyan. She will be Paul Lukas' leading woman, first in "The Vice Squad," by O. H. P. Garrett, with John Cromwell directing.

WHENEVER I THINK of Laura La Plant my mind goes back to those rainy days she and Reginald Denny did a series of comedies for Universal. She was excellent and so was he. Then they both got to be big stars and couldn't be annoyed with small time comedies. Laura went along as a star, playing big time dramas but at least to me she was never half as good as she was in the early Universal pictures. I am glad to know that she is coming back in comedies. She is making "Meet the Wife" for Christie Brothers.

I FIND LUNCHEON with Mary Pickford at Pacific. What a lovely place it is with sloping lawns and green and jonquil colored living room. Mary says she and Doug are planning to build a new house somewhere near the ocean but there, says Mary, "I am going to have steps leading from the drawing room right onto the lawn." Mary has had hundreds of letters and so have I, asking us just what station our talk on the radio will be on today. I wonder if it is out of order to say that it is over the Columbia broadcasting and we speak our piece tonight between 5:30 and 6, Pacific time.

I'LL HAVE TO hand the East a big compliment. Seena Owen has come back looking like a million dollars. She has been touring for five months with "The Blue Ghost" company and she comes back bringing with her a suitcase full of clippings. Seena was the only woman in the cast and she seems to have made a hit.

JORDAN HALL CONCERT

Marion Kingsbury, soprano, assisted by Pauline Danforth, pianist, and Georges Laurent, flutist, gave an interesting program at Jordon Hall last night before an audience of moderate size and unreliable temper.

Two airs from Mozart's "Figaro," selections from the "Matthew" and "John" Passions of Bach (with Mr. Laurent to help), an excellent group of seven songs set to German translations from the Persian, and a final air from Donizetti's "Torquato Tasso" constituted Mrs. Kingsbury's contributions to the occasion. Her voice, too light and inflexible for many of the songs, was not greatly aided by Miss Danforth's over-stressed accompaniments.

The pianist played very well, however, a solo group of pieces by Leo. Scarlatti and Debussy. And she was an understanding musician in her share of the Second Sonata for Piano and Flute by Gaubert, heard for the first time in Boston. In the latter, of course, M. Laurent was the paragon of musical virtues that he usually is.

Parisian Trio

The Trio Instrumental de Paris will give a concert on February 22 at the Boston Public Library Auditorium, which will be free to the public. The trio consists of Bernard Zighera, harpist; George Laurent, flutist, and Alfred Zighera, viola di gamba.

Greenwich Village Folks Romp in 'Up Pops the Devil'

SMART, CRISP COMEDY IS THEIR SPECIALTY AT THE WILBUR

ALL THEATER FANS are interested in Greenwich Village stories and in "Up Pops the Devil," now at the Wilbur, they have one of the merriest comedies ever written about the famous section of New York. The characters in the play are typical Greenwich Village folks and they unfold a story that has its serious phrases as well as its comedy.

Met's Terpsichore

Miss Margaret Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Sullivan of East Boston, is now appearing at the Metropolitan as a specialty dancer in "Cupids Carnival," a lavish Publix Revue devised and staged by Boris Petroff.

Margaret Sullivan

Miss Sullivan has been on the stage for the past five years traveling with Publix Units from coast to coast. In the many months of appearances and stops Miss Sullivan looks forward to her appearance at the Metropolitan with particular interest, as she says:

"I have traveled all over the country and have played over 150 theaters, but there is always one enjoyable week I look forward to and that is the Metropolitan in my own home town."

Louis M. Boas Due Back at Theater Duties Soon

Louis M. Boas, popular manager of a chain of New England movie picture theaters, including the Park and two others in Boston, is recovering from a second serious operation at the Cardinal O'Connell House on St. Elizabeth Hospital, where he has been confined for about two months.

It is expected that two or three weeks more of hospital habitation will be required for him to get his strength sufficiently back to return to his theatrical interests. In the meantime the center of his sick room visitors comprises an absentee list of Boston's film district magnates.

"HOME WEEK" AT HOWARD

The "Old Home Week" celebration now going on at the Old Howard is making a hit with the patrons of the theater. Two local comedians, Fred "Fails" Binder and Mike Sacks are furnishing the comedy which is part and parcel of "Speed Girls," the current show.

Sacks and Binder have long been known around Boston. Both began their stage careers in this city and each has a decided following here. Their comedy is at least 50 per cent extemporaneous and they are quick to seize upon any pretext to get a laugh. Mae Dix, Adeline Parks, Frances Farr and Alice Kennedy are the feminine stars, but for the most part they serve as comedy-feeders for the two Boston fun-makers.

Film Who's Who

Loretta Young, seen in the leading feminine role opposite Ronald Colman in his latest talking production, "The Devil to Pay," now at Loew's State, played her first important role in pictures with the late Lon Chaney in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." Miss Young was born at Salt Lake City. She early showed ability at dancing. She went to Los Angeles to Loretta Young pursue her dancing career soon after graduating from school.

"RANGO" WILL OPEN FRIDAY

"Rango" is due to open at the Olympia and Uptown next Friday. It was made in the jungles of Sumatra by Ernest Shoedsack. It tells a simple story of tragedy and retribution in the lives of jungle beasts.

There are comedy, pathos, tragedy set forth in such a manner as to reach the mind and heart of the young as well as the old.

THOUGHT SON WAS SILLY ON STAGE

THERE IS an old saying that a man is no hero to his own wife, or something like that, and it's a pretty good saying at that, but now along comes Jack Sheehan of "Nina Rosa" at the Shubert, who goes it one better, for Jack tells this on his mother.

It seems Mrs. Sheehan had seen her Johnny in local movie houses in little "tab" shows, and he was always a singer. Then one day when Jack was here in Boston, as the featured comic in "Katja," he thought he would ask his mother to come down from Manchester to see him. It was the first time she had a chance to see him in a big Broadway show. After the curtain came down Jack met her and asked her how she liked the show. She replied:

"It was a fine show, Johnny boy. That chap Leonard Ceeley has a great voice and that Collins girl is certainly beautiful to look at. And I think Doris Faloon (now Mrs. Jack Sheehan, incidentally), is the sweetest thing I've seen in a long time."

Jack waited, but apparently his mother was finished with her comments. And Jack thought his mother was trying hard to save him some injured feelings by passing by his work. But Jack braced himself and got set for the shock and finally asked how she liked her own son.

"You, Ind," she answered, "you were so silly I had all I could do to keep from laughing at you."

GEORGE STONE HAS BIG ROLE IN EPIC

George Stone

Miss Ferber got her true-to-life, warmly human characterizations for the town of Osage, Okla., in her best-selling novel from her home town of Kalamazoo, Mich. The capital of the Celery Kingdom supplied the human basis upon which the famous novelist placed dry but picturesque characters of early Oklahoma history, and made them come to life.

No more colorful, human and engaging characters have blossomed in fiction, on the stage or on the screen, than those of "Cimarron" as they are depicted by Richard Dix and the supporting cast.

MARY PICKFORD ON WNAC AT 8:30 TONIGHT

Louella Parsons, Hearst Film Editor, to Interview Screen Star

Mary Pickford will be heard over WNAC at 8:30 tonight in the Musical Cocktail program in the second of a series of interviews by Louella O. Parsons, motion picture editor of the Hearst newspapers and Universal Service.

Miss Pickford and Miss Parsons will chat on the half-hour program and the Hearst motion picture editor will query the screen actress on the early days of the films when Miss Pickford was known as "The Little Biograph Girl," through the days when she became "America's Sweetheart" and right down to the present, when talking pictures are in vogue.

Recently Miss Pickford refused offers of $5000 a week to broadcast, but on this occasion she is gladly going on the air because of her long friendship with Miss Parsons.

A supporting musical program will be provided by Raymond Paige and his orchestra, a male quartet and soloists.

Will Rogers will be heard over WEEI at 9:30 tonight in the first of three program appearances which he is making as an expression of gratitude to the Revelers, male quartet, and the three sponsors who have co-operated with Rogers in his Red Cross drouth relief plea. The humorist will be heard again Feb. 23 at 9:30 over WEEI and Feb. 26 at 8:30 over WBZA.

Victor Herbert's favorite prima donna, Fritzie Scheff, will be heard over WEEI at 8:30 tonight in a program composed entirely of Herbert melodies, including the song for which the composer and Miss Scheff are famous, "Kiss Me Again." On the same program will be Douglas Stanbury, baritone.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

ATLANTIC

WILL CONTINUE TO LEAD

A Statement of Policy by The Atlantic Refining Company

EVERYTHING that science could contribute has been embodied in ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH: A remarkable new formula. New crudes, carefully selected from the world's choice oil fields. New and improved refining processes. New testing methods.

Before we offered it to you, we put ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH to every conceivable test, on the road and in the laboratory. We found it had no equal, out of the scores of competitive motor fuels examined! Your enthusiastic approval has justified this care. Wherever it has been introduced, ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH has been acclaimed by thousands of motorists as the finest gasoline they have ever known.

It would, perhaps, be easy to rest with this achievement . . . to feel that with ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH we had reached the border-line of science and could go no farther. But that is not in accordance with Atlantic policy. We are not satisfied with today's best; we want to make that best even better tomorrow. Therefore, we are constantly carrying on research at the great Atlantic laboratory. We are in touch with automobile manufacturers, anticipating the fuel requirements of the new models they will bring out in the future. We are experimenting with everything which might possibly mean a better product.

We believe a large portion of the motoring public look to Atlantic for leadership in quality. We intend to maintain that leadership—tomorrow as well as today.
